

Good afternoon G, just want advice on my current situation.

I was part of TRW since January 2023 but didn't take it seriously/login daily till August 2023, when I started working on copywriting daily. I made many mistakes, struggled with discipline, and didn't follow instructions but as I improved over time, I got my first client through cold outreach in October 2023, after about a week he decided not to work with me.

Going back to cold outreach I went through another 2-3 clients who came for the sales call but we never ended up starting the discovery project. After getting Professor Andrew's opinion on why this may be, he told me the correct answer that I/my voice sounded super scared/weak and that I needed to join a fighting gym and boost my confidence.

Although I'm still convincing my parents to this day to let me join a fighting gym, I was able to focus on my confidence and boosted it a lot which I believe was the reason that another cold outreach company decided to work with me starting first week of November.

But during November/December, I was going through a lot of hardships and traveling (not an excuse) and although I gave them the work that we agreed on, it took me over a month due to my laziness, addictions, and bad decisions.

They didn't like my first draft and it was then that I got serious and decided to "actually" go all-in, I gave them a second draft shortly after but they weren't happy and a couple days later they said they longer wanted to work with me.

By this time its New Years and I've actually dived in to wanting to be successful and have been completing my daily checklist since January 1st, everyday without missing a day, which got me one warm and one cold sales call, both didn't want to work with me in the end.

And after that I came back from traveling and got a warm client whos local and I've been working with him for over a month now. I made him a website, and based on research from top players, I started editing YouTube videos for him to grow his audience to get students for his mentorship and other programs.

I started uploading content for him everyday starting yesterday, but I found out from the AFM campus on how if you haven't posted in a month, and you're not getting 1,000 views over 48 hours, then you might need to create a new YouTube account.

I confirmed from an expert in the campus and he said that there is a chance that I might need to make a new account since he hasn't uploaded in 4 years and the only way I can find out is by posting for over a month.

But now I don't see why I should work with him because although he has some credibility, the amount of time and efforts it would take to grow his channel (which is at least 4-5 weeks if we continue existing channel and hope it booms, or 2-3 months if we create a new channel) and get students would be basically the same as starting my own brand since I'm working based on commission from results instead of a retainer or something like that.

And today I discussed payment with him a little bit as a heads up because I told him this is weeks of work ahead, so I'll probably set some sort of retainer or weekly pay for this. But he wasn't agreement on that, saying that I haven't even got much content out yet, which is true because it took me a month to make his custom CMS website of 4-5 hours of work everyday. Currently on Day 4 of uploading content.

So now because of that I basically have 3 choices, 1, try to use some new method to get him students, 2, keep editing videos for him for over a month and see the progress, 3, start all over again with outreach or another campus. I really don't know what to do because I've gone through like 7 potential clients at this point, and I've still made $0. Please advice what I should do next, appreciate it.
