

Ducal Connections to the Royal Family

This work was compiled by Brooke, of the Google Peerage News group in February 2023. He deserves all the credit for this work which shows the lines of every Duke and Duchess ever created (hereditary and life), designated, nominated or styled, and their connection to a given Monarch.

It was originally posted in 27 different threads, but in order to maintain a complete and ordered version, I have compiled these parts into this one Google Doc with Brooke's permission.

Part 1: Notes

Ducal connections to the Royal Family--Part I

1. Instead of one giant family tree, which would have been difficult to manage and understand, I have broken the trees down by monarch. The only exceptions are for the Cornwall and Rothesay dukedoms, which are listed by themselves. Please also note that those Dukes are only listed in that location with that specific title.

2. My goal was to find ONE royal connection of the FIRST Duke/Duchess. (Many of them, even the first ones in the ducal line, have multiple connections to the Royal Family.) I also wanted that connection to be the closest one to a monarch. That means that the Prince of Wales (as Duke of Cambridge), although he is related to Queen Elizabeth II, is listed with the monarch he is most closely related to, his father, King Charles III.

3. My primary concern on all of the trees are the Dukes and Duchesses. Where appropriate, I have included their highest title prior to their ducal rank, which may or may not include titles that they may have inherited from their parents.

4. All of the relevant blood ancestors are shown. With regards to marriages: All males who married into the family are shown, regardless if they held a title or not. (This is to primarily show change of family name.) Females who married into the family are shown only if they were peeresses in their own right, were members of the Royal Family or if their marriage affected the descent of a title or particular name change.

5. My main sources were the last print editions of both Burke's Peerage and Debrett's Peerage, "Britain's Royal Families by Alison Weir (1989 ed.), as well as online editions of Burke's, the Complete Peerage, Debrett's and the Scots Peerage. In some cases, information was not available from these sources, so I used the following online sources: britannica.com, genealogics.org, our-royal-titled-noble-and-commoner-ancestors.com, thepeerage.com and wikipedia.org (only when sourced). Special mention as well to two extremely useful online sources from our own members, Leigh Rayment's Peerage Page, now maintained by maltagenealogy and Paul Theroff's An Online Gotha.

6. I often found that even well respected sources such as Burke's, Complete Peerage and Debrett's disagreed on information such as dates of birth and/or death and the numbering of peers. I tried my best to reconcile the information, as my goal was to be as accurate as possible. My apologies for any errors or confusion.

Lastly, thanks to all of you for your patience and help in answering the many questions and request for help that I have posted.

Part 3: Descendants of Edward I of England

Ducal connections to the Royal Family--Part 3

This part contains the descendants of King Edward I of England (1239-1307). It is by far the largest part of any in this series. It contains a total of 42 dukedoms, 40 of them being hereditary, 1 created for life and 1 that was styled. It also contains the descent of 9 present day dukes (one of them with 2 creations) -- Norfolk, Devonshire, Argyll (1701), Marlborough, Atholl, Manchester, Leinster, Sutherland, Westminster and Argyll (1892).

The massive tree involves the descendants of 5 of Edward's children: from his first marriage: Joan of Acre, Margaret of England and Elizabeth of Rhuddlan and from his second marriage, Thomas of Brotherton and Edmund of Woodstock.

Because of its size, I will be posting in several sections, but will be doing so using this thread.

The titles included in this post, along with the dates of creation, last names and status of the titles are:

Part 4: Dukes of Cornwall

Ducal connections to the Royal Family-Part 4

Unlike the other parts previously posted and those to come (with one exception, Rothesay), Part 4 involves the descent of one title, the dukedom of Cornwall. Also, since each titleholder is related to the Royal Family, instead of doing an actual family tree, this part lists all of those men who have held that title, and how they are related to the Royal Family (plus additional information).

Titles, dates of creation, last names and current status are as follows:

Cornwall (E) 1337 -- PLANTAGENET (1st thru 8th Dukes)-- Extant
TUDOR (9th thru 13th Dukes)

Part 5: Descendants of Edward III of England

Ducal connections to the Royal Family--Part 5

In this part, we have ducal connections that descend from 4 sons of Edward III, including Lionel of Antwerp and John of Gaunt. There are a total of 32 dukedoms included here, including 2 that were for life, and 1 that was nominated.

6 of the dukedoms are held in the present day: Somerset, (1547), Beaufort, Bedford (1694), Rutland, Northumberland (1766) and Wellington. Of particular note is the Bedford dukedom, which I had originally planned to list with Part 3.

Because some of the trees are lengthy, I will be posting several times, but all under this same thread.

Titles, creation, last names and current status are as follows:

Part 18: Mistress of George I of Great Britain

Ducal connections to the Royal Family-- Part 18

Part 18 stands out from all of the other parts, even more so than the Cornwall and Rothesay "trees" (really, more "lists", but still, with blood ties).

In this part, we have only 1 duchess, but she is the only duke/duchess for which I could find no BLOOD tie to the Royal Family.

The Duchess of Munster & Kendal, like the Duchesses of Cleveland and Portsmouth before her, was a royal mistress. However, unlike those 2 women, Ermengarde Melusina had no ancestral connection to the Royal Family. Still, I didn't want to leave her out, as she was still created a duchess, and a double one at that.

With that caveat in mind, here is her information:

Munster (I) 1716 for life-- vON dER SCHULENBERG--Extinct 1743

Kendal (GB) 1719 for life-- vON dER SCULENBERG--Extinct 1743
