A. INTRODUCTION (Arial 12)

The entire content of the article is written using Arial font size 12, spacing 1.15 with the beginning of the paragraph indented 6 strokes. Each paragraph can consist of several subparagraphs which are written numbered. The minimum number of pages is 8 pages and the maximum is 12 A4 size pages. Writing references using Mendeley reference manager with APA Style (William J & Robert W, 2003).

The introduction briefly outlines the background regarding the problem being discussed, issues related to the problem being solved, reviews of research that has been carried out previously by other researchers which is relevant to the research being carried out. Apart from that, the introduction also contains things that differentiate it from previous research and the reasons why it is important to research (Zhao, 2014).

B. LITERATURE REVIEW (Arial 12)

The literature review contains a description of theories, findings and other research materials obtained from reference materials which are used as the basis for this research.

C. METHOD (Arial 12)

Research methods include the type of research, research approach, informants or samples, research instruments and data analysis techniques used to solve problems.
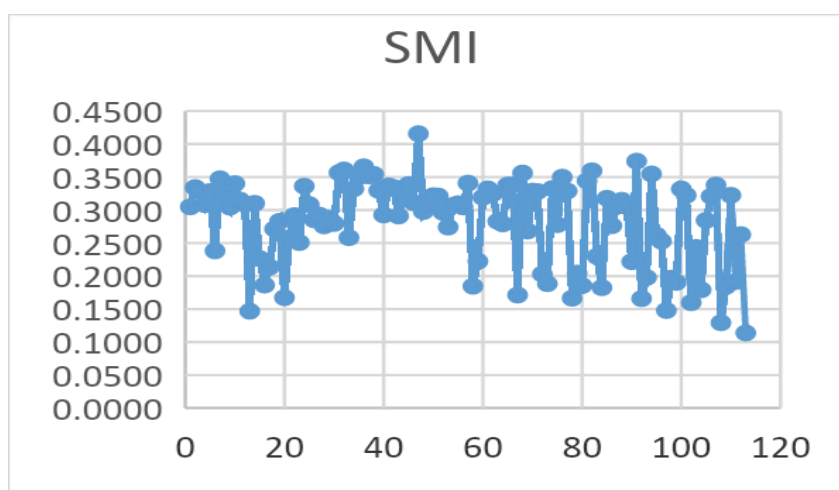

D. RESULT AND DISCUSSION (Arial 12)

Discussion of the research and testing results obtained is presented in the form of theoretical descriptions, both qualitatively and quantitatively. Experiment results should be displayed in the form of graphs or tables. For graphics, you can follow the format for diagrams and pictures. The table or image data entered is the result of processed data and research methods, not raw data. All tables and figures that you include in the document must be adjusted to the order of 1 column or the full size of one piece of paper, to make it easier for reviewers to understand the meaning of the images.
