Sid E. Lawson:

Sid is Sydney's clone-kid who is a scientist-mechanic like their mom. Since being created, they've grown up a lot faster than the average cat- a side effect of being- well- an unplanned clone. Their most recent project is a teleportation machine, and they hope it (as well as finishing school early) will help them finish college early. That way they can finally start their life! It's what they always wanted, right?

Sydney Grace Lawson:

Since 2006, Sydney has been trying to get her life together and move past everything (which includes dying and coming back from the dead). She hates being stuck in the past, and while she has told Sid about her late father, she never really talks about anything else.

Peterson Duckhat-Barragan:

Long after Book One, Peter married Mascot, and became somewhat-friends with Sydney again. He's, thankfully, not a loser anymore! He's been trying to study to become a nurse again, which was something he was doing when he was a young adult.

Maxwell “Mascot” Barragan:

It's him! Mascot! From the last book! After living in Pennsylvania for a year after Book One, Mascot moved back to Collardale and eventually befriended Peter. A few years later they got married. He's still BFFs with Sydney, as she and Peter are his closest friends/partners.

Teresa “Tessa” Barragan:

It seems I failed to mention Peter and Mascot's daughter! Tessa is 7 years old, and was adopted a few years after her parents got married. She and Sid aren't that close, but she's likes to visit

Sydney and her grandmother, Mabel.

Mabel L. Duckhat:

Peter's mom, and Tessa and Sid's grandma! Technically, she isn't Sid's official grandma, but she fills the role nonetheless. She's very loving and energetic, and wishes the best for everyone, much like her son.
