July 23rd, 2022

Jacksonville, DX

Lt. Governor Tweek, well known libertarian and gun rights advocate, recently took a trip down to Jacksonville, Dixie to meet with donors to discuss a nationwide campaign later this year. Tweek has been rumored to be preparing a presidential campaign, but it is still unknown what campaign is about to begin. While in Jacksonville Tweek stopped at the First Coast Technical College for a National Rifle Association meetup where he ended up getting asked to weigh in on the upcoming Governor's race.

The National Rifle Association fights for gun rights of all Americans. With recent disruptions to governor succession, the office of Governor in Dixie will be very influential on ensuring your rights are protected. With an opportunity to improve gun rights in Dixie, the Lt. Governor had the following to say.

"You see, Dixie is at a crossroads this election. Not only did Dixie lose their Governor just the other day, but some old assemblyperson who didn't even vote this term is now Governor. This state needs an impactful leader to defend gun rights, and that choice is clearly former Vice President and current Representative Seldom. The right to bear arms is a right that all Americans have. No politician should ever make anyone in America feel like it may be infringed. Sadly, this is not the case, and many from the left are attacking your right to defend yourself. Now, there is a couple things to remember. The smallest minority is the individual. And an armed minority is a lot harder to oppress. In the interest of any American, it is important to ensure that the right to keep and bear arms cannot be infringed. The only candidate in Dixie who can do this is Seldom"

Tweek and Seldom share a rather long history, with both as contenders for the Republican presidential ticket. Both are rather liberty orientated but some major differences regarding foreign policy and social issues. Tweek has announced at a later larger rally with Seldom while he visits Tampa later this week.
