

Basic info

Birth name: Brendan G Callaghan

Ring name: Brendan Callaghan

Nickname(s): Brendo

Age: 35 (6 July 1989)

Place of birth: South Boston, MA

Currently residing: Las Vegas, NV

Theme music: "Choke" by Bowling For Soup

Height: 6'4"

Weight: 250 lbs

Alignment: Tweener

Debut year: 2008

Ring attire: Black tights with blue, white and gold design and his name in matching colours and black wrestling boots

Pibase: Jensen Ackles

Twitter: @SupermanBrendan

Wrestling info

Gimmick: Professional slacker who likes to entertain and make people laugh

Strengths:

- Sturdy like a tree (can be hard to knock him down, especially for those smaller than him)

- Very resourceful (always has tricks up his sleeves that enable him to do the least work for best results)
- Being a second-generation wrestler (was trained by his father Nathan and had all the training and exposure opportunities back then)

Weaknesses:

- Shortcut king (his tricks go from elaborate plans to half-baked ideas for “humour”)
- Playful jokester (probably doesn’t take some things as seriously as he should)

Fighting style: Showman/Power/Striker mix with dirty tricks and occasional basic top-rope moves

Finishers:

1. Southie Glory — Electric chair driver
2. Awesome As Fuck Kapow — Springboard forearm smash

Signatures:

1. Brendan’s Big Bag O’ Trix

Basically anything to trick the referee or opponent to get an opening in the match or to win, from something simple to an elaborate plan. His personal favourite gag is the “dead leg”, stiff kick to the opponent’s upper thigh (usually to set up the Southie Glory)

Another example: Randomly pass out or play possum during a match. If the opponent gets close, he’ll catch them with a small package pin.

Another example: While the referee is distracted/knocked out, Brendan exits the ring to grab an illegal object then tosses it to a surprised opponent before pretending to pass out in the middle of the ring as if knocked out. Ref, thinking the opponent used an illegal object, either takes it away and Brendan catches the distracted opponent with a rollup or immediately disqualifies them and declares him as the winner.

2. Boston Full Throttle

Delayed spinebuster to giant swing (speed increases with each rotation of usually 7 rotations, may be more depending on the match and crowd reception)

Common moves:

1. Snap scoop powerslam
2. Multiple slingblades in succession
3. Delayed vertical suplex
4. Body hooks/uppercut combo with theatrics to burning lariat

5. Corner forearm smash twice + body avalanche combo
6. Pop-up powerbomb
7. Suicide dive
8. 450 splash
9. Apron back suplex
10. Flying elbow drop

Favourite weapon: He'll borrow his father Nathan's signature wired baseball bat

Favourite match type:

- A gimmick match (the more ridiculous the gimmick, the better, cos he's a simple guy, he just wants to entertain the crowd)
- Clusterfuck multi-person matches so he can hang back and let others wear each other out before he swoops in for the win.

Disliked match type: Anything with an opponent who threatens or scares him

Known relationships:

Jade Night (fiance)
Nathan Callaghan (father)
Lily Callaghan (mother)
Ryan Callaghan (brother)
Sean Callaghan (brother)
Liam Callaghan (brother)
Codie Callaghan (half sister)
Leanne Jones (Southie head trainer at Crucible Academy)
Everyone else related to Callaghans, in Southie and Crucible Academy
Tony DeStefano (pain in his ass)
Kenny Dougie (another pain in his ass)

Character background

Brendan has always been very close to his family. Growing up, Brendan developed many interests especially in sports which were supported by his parents. His father Nathan started training him in wrestling when he was a teenager and he later made his official debut at the age of 18. He fell in love with the thrill of performing and had no problems getting booked due to his training and natural charisma. But at the time, Brendan had a problem with sticking to one thing and after a few years, he got bored with the wrestling life and quit. He took on odd jobs (including working as a living statue) and lived a simple life while struggling to make ends meet on his own. But wrestling is in his blood and soon enough, he returned to it and signed with Proving Grounds Wrestling (PGW) where he teamed up with Ryan, the brother he's closest to.

Things started to slowly go downhill when Nathan broke the news of his other family that he has been keeping secret for years. Brendan took it the hardest and was the last of his brothers to meet with half-sister Noel. Sometime later, another half-brother was discovered: Michael. By this time, Brendan had moved to Empire Pro Wrestling (EPW) and begun showing a rebellious attitude towards Nathan. When Nathan left EPW to open Liberty Pro in the East Coast territory of the Championship Wrestling Coalition (CWC), Brendan followed. Being the owner's son, Brendan was constantly teased and insulted by his peers for potential bias yet he had received none of the perks of such a relationship. Instead, he was punished in his matches. This not only put a strain in Brendan's relationship with Nathan but also his brothers especially Sean whom he tagged with on occasion during their time in Liberty together. The highly emotionally-charged feud exploded in Liberty's first supershow "Shippin' Off to Boston" in a Boston Street Fight. Brendan won in the end but it put Nathan in the hospital for a while.

Following that, Brendan moved on to competitions for various championships but never got far until the tournament for the then new and unnamed championship at Battle Symphony. While the referee was raising Brendan's hand in victory, Nathan interrupted to announce the final and secret entrant Scarlett Highland. Due to fatigue, Brendan failed to beat Scarlett that night and lost the chance to be the champion. Scarlett was then named the new Trials champion. Dubbing it the "Brooklyn Screwjob", Brendan, alongside Felix Vialpando who also felt cheated of his loss and Scarlett who just basically wanted screen time to promote her show "In the Life of Scarlett Highland", went to the ring to call out Nathan on it. Annoyed with Scarlett, Brendan played a prank on her at the end of the segment by soaking her with a water gun in the middle of the ring. And thus began their huge rivalry for the Trials championship. They fought thrice for the title under peculiar rules that favoured Scarlett more such as "the no touching her hair" rule and him having to wrestle with a black bag over his head. On Liberation 21, Scarlett put her title on the line against Brendan yet again but this time, Voidstar made his appearance which frightened Brendan so much that he immediately ran out of the ring to escape, allowing her to retain due to count-out. Because of Voidstar's interference, the match was pushed to Liberation 23 and again, Voidstar appeared to scare the living shit out of the two of them. But Brendan, being the first to nearly piss in his pants, took advantage while Scarlett was screaming in fear and won the Trials championship with a roll-up. Voidstar picked up Scarlett and went to the back; Scarlett was never seen again.

Thanks to Tessa Sweet, Voidstar's interference is linked to Nathan. Brendan is convinced that Nathan had sent Voidstar to scare him and possibly punish him as revenge for beating him at Shippin' Off to Boston. This caused Brendan to get paranoid and fear for his life while dealing with all sorts of trauma and shit, forcing him to seek medical hypnosis treatment. Unbeknownst to him, he was tricked by the doctor and instead of getting help for overcoming his fears and trauma, he was hypnotised into falling asleep every time he heard a certain type of strange tinkly music. It played during his match against Riley Savell on Liberation 24 and he dropped her as he fell sideways on the mat, fast asleep. It's only when the music stopped can the referee wake him up. But he was disoriented, allowing her to capitalise and beat him with The Unsaved. This left Brendan highly disturbed as he had no idea what happened. Later on Twitter, after watching the match replay at home, he claimed to have fallen asleep again at the point when he did during the actual match too. Brendan and Voidstar finally faced off in a 2 out of 3 falls match at March Madness on Night 2. But Brendan was too afraid of Voidstar that it affected him greatly during the match and things just went downhill when their pinfall score became a tie. Voidstar relentlessly brutalised Brendan and delayed a pinfall opportunity just to prolong the violence. Seemingly having had enough of it, Jade Night ran out to the ring to his aid with Nathan's barbed wire bat and struck Voidstar with it. This essentially gave Voidstar the overall victory and the Trials title but Jade wasn't done as she continued to attack him. That's when all the lights went out and Voidstar was seen carrying the title and Jade towards the back. All the while, Brendan was still flat out unconscious. On the following Liberation 27, an emotional Brendan met with Tessa to talk about everything and what happened with Jade, which he had personally requested, but for some reason, he chickened out at the last second and left. He had been quiet on Twitter for a while after that before popping back up on the timeline with a tweet that said: "The best thing about Twitter is that I can talk to Void without peeing in my pants". It was later revealed to Brendan that Nathan had allowed Voidstar to go after him, possibly as a way to motivate his eldest son to do more for his career. With Jade back at his side and Voidstar eventually gone from Liberty, Brendan's nightmare was finally over.

Things seemed to return to normal after that, with Nathan constantly booking him in big matches and even title matches where he would lose time and time again. Nathan was still trying to push Brendan but his eldest son had gone back to his slacker ways. Brendan continued to fail at every opportunity till the company closed. Then he joined Revival Wrestling where he also had shit luck (damn those tag matches!) before taking a break from active competition.

A few months later, he and Nathan ventured down under to help run ThunderDome, an Australian wrestling school affiliated with In Your House Wrestling Federation. This lasted for 5 months before ThunderDome closed and they focused on managing Liberty Pro. Brendan maintained his involvement only behind the scenes.

2 years later in Jan 2022, Brendan's mother Lily made a shocking return to his family's life after faking her death for 10 years. At first, neither his parents would tell the real truth behind her disappearance. But during Lily's disastrous attempts at damn near ruining Liberty Pro with her takeover, the family was once again smack dab in the centre of the limelight and Brendan and Nathan once again were at each other's throats. Seeing Lily again overwhelmed Brendan who was just happy to see her again despite her shadiness. Nathan on the other hand accused Brendan of taking her side over his, claiming that he had hidden the truth about her to protect him and his brothers. And it didn't help that Nathan let The Society beat up his youngest brother Liam, leaving Brendan even more confused and resentful towards Nathan. But Nathan was right all along as Lily one day disappeared again and no matter how hard Brendan tried, he couldn't find her. Once again, she abandoned him and the family, never to be seen again. With Jade's help, the father and son repaired their relationship before Nathan's retirement months later, passing down the company to Brendan and Jade. Until the company ran into legal issues. Womp womp. Two years later in mid 2024, the company had finally sorted that out and announced the returning #FSOCIETY that is owned by Jade's brother Chris. However, the company went into another hiatus. Womp womp wommmmmmp!

So what's Brendan to do but look for a place to wrestle? NOPE! He's got mommy issues and decided he's not ready to wrestle yet and instead joined Nate as a trainer at Crucible Academy in the Southie faction.

A lot of bad things happened then fast forward Lily is back—good and healthy—and his parents have happily reunited since. This eases Brendan and his childhood issues are finally on the mend, now trying to make something more of himself while settling into his own sweet life with Jade.

CDs

"Family Secrets"

"The Weight of the Truth"