Quirk

Her pituitary gland produces a hormone that causes her to resemble a canine, giving her heightened senses and better stamina. When Elizabeth is in high stress situations, adrenaline can cause this hormone to spike and turn Elizabeth into a large, bipedal wolf like creature. While in this state she loses all control over her instincts, making her unpredictable and dangerous.

As a counter Elizabeth wears silver, which suppresses her quirk. When her quirk is triggered and suppressed, Elizabeth will become noticeably more canine-like (sharper teeth, nails, animalistic mannerisms) which still makes her stronger and faster at the cost of immense pain. It is still not as strong as she would be when fully transformed.

As an adult Elizabeth has full control over her ability to transform

Backstory

Elizabeth came from humble beginnings as the result of a teenage pregnancy. Her mother, Helen, was a rising pageant star, with parents that were fairly well off, making them minor royalty in the small southern US town they lived in. Richard, Elizabeth's father, dated her and Helen became pregnant at the beginning of her sophomore year. The fallout of the relationship caused Helen to be disowned by her family, a consequence of her parents' traditional values as well as their prejudice toward Richard's mutation that gave him a distinctly wolf-like appearance.

The two were fortunately supported by Richard's family--on the condition that the two immediately get married, something Helen's parents were all too happy to consent to as long as they didn't have to deal with the problem anymore. Saddled with a new wife, a child on the way, and a family that was already struggling to make ends meet, Richard turned to the military as a means of support. By the time Elizabeth was born, the family had already left to live on the first of many military installations.

Elizabeth's quirk did not manifest fully until she was five years old. While living in Japan, Elizabeth saw her best friend being hurt by two older children. When she confronted them, Elizabeth blacked out as her quirk made her transform for the first time. One of the boys was seriously injured in the ensuing attack, and Elizabeth remembered nothing of the incident before waking up in the hospital, piecing together what had happened from her friend's account as well as what her parents were willing to tell her. After running tests, it seemed that Elizabeth inherited a wolf quirk from her father, but her mother's quirkless constitution made her unable to control it.

Her family moved to another country soon after, but Elizabeth would develop an intense self loathing over her quirk that would continue for the rest of her childhood. Although both her parents loved their daughter unconditionally, Richard was almost never home; Helen, though not physically abusive, was ill equipped to handle a child alone due to her age and quirklessness. This was only exacerbated by her nonexistent social life because of her odd canine like mannerisms and sullen demeanor. Without adequate support from family or friends, Elizabeth grew up imitating the discipline and training of the soldiers she saw on base to vent her frustrations and keep her emotionally-driven quirk under control.

Being a hero was something that had always interested her. Using her quirk to save others seemed, to her, the only way to prove that her quirk didn't have to be monstrous. Her own self confidence issues kept her from seriously pursuing it--she instead followed her father's path, going to a military academy in California for her first year of high school--until they were transferred to Yokusuka Naval Base in Japan. With the blessing of her parents, she applied and was accepted into a hero course, determined to become a successful hero.

Personality

MBTI: Logistician ISTJ-T

Elizabeth struggles constantly with feelings of intense self hatred, which she channels into an incredible work ethic. She is responsible, hard working, and altruistic to the point of not caring about her own physical well being due to her own lack of self worth. She also masks her social awkwardness with a veil of stoicism and seriousness but, under that, can be prone to anxiety and self-consciousness. This self-consciousness can also inadvertently, despite her empathetic nature, lead to her making decisions without considering how it would make others feel.

Because she is a military brat, Elizabeth was raised to have a deep love for her home country of America and its military. While as an adult her view grew more nuanced, as a teenager especially she can sometimes be blindly patriotic--something that can cause some friction with her Japanese friends.

As a hero, Elizabeth is stalwart in her beliefs. While she can logically see the shades of gray in hero society and the sometimes blurred lines between heroes and villains, she feels it is the duty of a hero to pursue a perfect ideal. Because of this it is hard to convince her to make sacrifices for what is deemed the 'greater good.' Though she is incredibly loyal to her friends, they would have to accept that her resolve on her principles could not even be bent for them...at least, she doesn't think so.

Appearance

Elizabeth is tall and muscular, standing at 5'8 with blonde hair and golden eyes. Her heightened senses can make her sensitive to makeup, so she usually avoids it save for special occasions; and she will never be caught wearing perfume or any strong smelling lotion. The way she carries herself betrays her background surrounded by military and attending military school; her posture is always perfectly straight, and she can come across as intense and intimidating without meaning to.

As an adult, Elizabeth becomes skilled at selectively choosing how to manifest her canine quirk. She often will choose to have a wolf's tail for balance, or wolf's ears to better pinpoint sound when working. Her quirk also manifests in her prominent canine teeth, as well as black nails. Because of her body constantly growing and shrinking when she turns into a wolf, Elizabeth also has stretch marks across her upper back, upper arms, shoulders, and thighs. She is very self conscious about this.

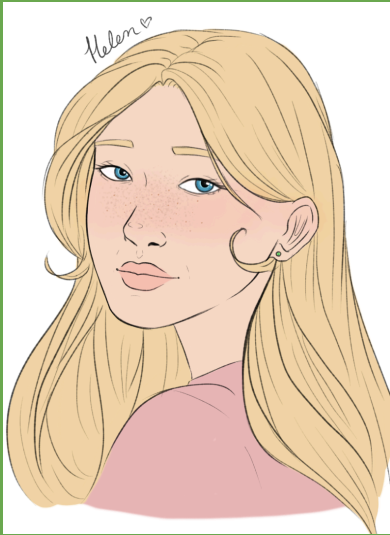

While working, her hero uniform consists of a camouflage jacket and pants, with lace up combat boots and a green beret similar to an American army uniform. She also has a visor, which she uses to correct color blindness, and special earbuds which have been developed to restrict hearing when noise goes beyond a certain decibal. Other equipment include guns which shoot nonlethal ammunition.

Family/Relationships

Richard Sharp (31, alive): Having joined the military as a teenager, Richard has been physically absent for most of Elizabeth's life. This did not hurt Elizabeth's relationship with her father, and when he is present the two are incredibly close. To Elizabeth, her father's decision to join the military for the family's sake fuels her motivation to become a daughter worthy of such a sacrifice.

Quirk: Wolf. Richard can do anything a wolf can do. His heightened senses and natural cooperative nature make his quirk highly desired by the US military.

Helen Sharp (31, alive): Before she had Elizabeth Helen came from one of the most prominent families in her town. After she found out she was pregnant, Helen was disowned by her family and had to give up any dreams of going to college. Helen turned to alcohol to cope with her depression after Elizabeth was born. While she was never physically abusive to her daughter, Elizabeth does recall the first five years of her life as being punctuated by periods of her mother's emotional abuse and neglect. A car accident involving alcohol caused her to receive treatment and stop her unhealthy behavior.

While Elizabeth recognizes that her mother has changed, their relationship is frustratingly paradoxical—it's a loving relationship, as Helen more or less was Elizabeth's only friend growing up. But the way she treated Elizabeth during her formative years left Elizabeth with lingering insecurities over whether or not her mother might resent her.

Richard 'RJ' Sharp (newborn to 5, alive): Elizabeth's brother who was born shortly after Richard returned from his final tour of duty when Elizabeth was 20.

Quirk: Animal Speech. RJ can communicate with animals.

Benjiro Ryuga (15, alive): The friend that Elizabeth protected when she lost control of her quirk as a child. The two have kept in touch after Elizabeth moved, and she considers Benjiro her oldest and closest friend. He's especially important to her because he's the only person outside her family that knows all of the details about her quirk.

Trivia

- When I say Elizabeth's quirk gives her all the senses of a canine, that also includes the drawbacks. She is red-green colorblind and has a dulled sense of taste.
- Elizabeth is allergic to chocolate.
- Her favorite food is peanut butter, and would eat only peanut butter for the rest of her life if she could.
- Wolves have a protein in their eyes that aligns them to earth's magnetic field, so she has a perfect sense of direction.
- Elizabeth can communicate with canines specifically. As an adult her agency includes a team of german shepherds she employs as sidekicks, housed in their own special kennel area.
