Okay, Jayden, today we are going to focus on catching up on all of my work.

See, I was tempted to get coffee this morning to motivate me, but I didn't want to destroy my appetite--plus, the tea will be enough to get through the day.

Today, you will not be distracted by YouTube, you won't play video games, heck, you won't even join the Discord. I am going to focus on my work.

No, I know you'll hate it, I know you'll despise it, I know you'll really, really want to do something else, but I need to do this, like, REALLY need to.

I will put on an ASMR video, but do not give in to the temptation to watch another series, please.

No. Stop. I will not. You just wait patiently in that corner until I'm done, and then you can binge-watch YouTube or play video games.

...

Hey, you know what! I was actually thinking that too! This conversation could be a great piece, I'm even thinking that I'd title it "Internal Conflict".

Yeah, I'll-- Wait. You sneaky little... NO. How dare you tempt me with writing poetry! I will write it after my work.

What if I forget what I said later? Well... that's a good point... but... no. I will not give in. I am going to do my work and you wait there.

I am not going to forget.

Don't "what if" me. I know.

Can't you go back to talking about YouTube and video games? Can't we just drop this poetry stuff?

You found one of my weaknesses? N-no... you did not.

It'll only take an hour? I mean... that's a pretty good argument...

No. I. Will. Focus. On. My. Work.

Focus. Focus. Focus.

You will not tempt me with...

But. What if I do forget what I said, then I'll never be able to write the piece.

No. Stop. Don't think like that. Don't give in.

But. It won't take that long.

...

Fine. I'll write ONLY the piece, THEN we get to work. No more sidetracking after that, capiche?

Yeah?

At least we finally came to some sort of agreement.

You better not screw me over and entice me to do something else...