

Hell

An extradimensional planet, apparently the Earth of a parallel reality that was then in its Eleventh Century CE, which was transferred into an extradimensional space through a ritual of vast power performed by its ruler. While no longer lit by the sun, dim light is provided by an entity bound to orbit the planet in imitation of the cycle of day and night. (During their first visit to this realm, the Discovery Company learned that this entity is apparently some sort of phoenix.) The ruler of Hell, Asmodeus, and his subordinates, known as exarchs, are known for recruiting, or more accurately enslaving, people from other realities through means similar to the demonic pacts described in the mythologies of certain cultures. They have only recently begun to engage in these activities on the World in the Aftermath, as it was formerly located too far away (in a metaphysical sense) from their extradimensional space.
