Backstory:

Childhood:

Originally from the West Shroud, Audrey lived a quiet life until the Calamity. A brash yet kind girl in her youth, she spent her youth out in the forest exploring, climbing, and overall basking in nature. While she always strove to treat everyone with respect, her friendship with a peculiar Viera got her into many fights defending them from the other children.

Her parents taught her basic skills of weaving and botany, alongside the laws of the forest. She learned from her father all about what it meant to be a Conjurer and a White Mage. Awestruck, Audrey looked up to her father and said she would do all she could do to be like him. It was with him that she would occasionally venture to the city of Gridania.

Otherwise she would take after her mother, Alexandra. A hunter by trade, she often assisted the Wood Wailers in their patrols. A pillar of strength in their spread out village, Alexandra did her best to pass down her own family skills of hunting- to little success. It seemed from birth that Audrey had an innate desire to heal rather than hurt. She was known to rarely leave the sea of trees she called home, preferring the quiet life it provided over the city. That- was perhaps one of the strongest traits shared by mother and daughter.

Audrey had only seen nineteen summers when the Battle of Carteneau broke out. Barely knowing the basics in magic and fighting, Audrey was left behind, watching her parents leave. As the trees turned to ash around her, she desperately tried to run towards the city for protection. In the overwhelming smog, Audrey lost her way, crashing into Lilyswim Lake. Pinned by fallen trees, she called out for help. Anyone who would have heard her was already a corpse. Staring up hopeless at the Blood Moon Dalamud, something within her changed... "Menphina's..Loyal Hound.. It's so red. Someone, anyone, help me..." Her earring shone with a dazzling light as the poor girl fainted. It would be years before those eyes would open again; they would not be the same when they did.

After the Calamity:

Waking with a jolt, Audrey would find herself in strange clothes on a carriage headed to Gridania. She could remember little of her life, save for the trauma of the Calamity. Four years had passed, and it seemed as though no one remembered the small family living many malms away. The only item in her possession was a pouch containing a few hundred gil and a White Mages soulstone.

Audrey would wander Gridania for a while before meeting a woman named June Charbonneau; a woman in search of skilled fighters and healers to slay a great dragon. Hearing her story June was skeptical, but Audrey's soulstone piqued her interest. Getting her situated with the Conjurers guild (who seemed astonished at this unknown woman's possession of such a sacred object) June gifted her with a staff once Audrey proved that she could in fact wield magic. Despite her yearning to stay in the Twelveswood and continue to attempt to piece her memory together Audrey felt an unconscious pull to accept June's request. They would later meet two others, Ancrene and Rokoko Telkoko, a mage and skilled swordsman. With that the party was complete, it was time to travel to Ishgard. The three strangers would all become wards of the Carbonneau house in Ishgard, slowly developing a friendship on the long journey.

It was during her time in that frozen citystate she would meet two very important people. A Viera who went by the name of Velvet, and a knight who would soon become her husband. The events that would transpire in the next four years would ultimately shape Audrey into the woman she is today.

Ishgard:

Leaving Ishgard/Present Day:

Hooks:

- White Mages, though exceedingly rare, are in fact revived in a small quantity thanks to the Padjal. Gridanians may recognize the white and red robes Audrey wears for work, or perhaps even her by face if they work in or alongside the Conjuror's Guild.

- While a more recent development, Audrey has started to teach lessons to the young conjurers of Gridania, particularly a group of three children who have displayed an above average potential.

- Ishgardian nobility love rumors and gossip just as much as they worship Halone. Those who were in Ishgard at the end of the Seventh Umbral Era up until the End of the Dragonsong War might have heard "scandalizing rumors" of a "lowly Hyur from the forest" marrying a "bastard Ishgardian Knight." Rumors quelled to only the occasional mention after his murder and her subsequent departure from Ishgard.

- A few moons ago there was an unsettling report that Elementals in the Deepwoods of the Twelveswood had become corrupted. The rumors only known to those in the Conjuror's Guild are that it was a White mage with a group of outsiders that cleanses the forest of this taint.

Alexandra Valentine

Job: Hunter

Race/Clan: Hyur/Highlander

Birthday: 5/8

Height: 5'7"

Guardian: Nophica

Gender/Sexuality: Cis/Straight

Pronouns: She/Her

Current Age: 52

Status: Widowed (no intention of romance)

Hobbies: Hunting, Archery, spending time in nature, whatever her daughter wants to do

Backstory:

Early Life:

Born (y. 1529) and raised in Gridania as a hunter, Alexandra lived her entire life in the West Shroud until the Calamity. She met Cecil one day while hunting when she was 17. After 2 years of friendship the two of them started a relationship. They married when she was 22, and at age 24 she became a mother.

Scarcely traveling to the city proper, Alexandra raised not just Audrey, but her neighbor Cordelia's child as well. She taught them the basics of hunting and tracking, although her daughter was more enamored with the healing magics her father wielded. Though at first disappointed that she would not be able to pass down the long held family skill of hunting, she knew that forcing a skill upon her was not worth the cost of her daughters happiness.

Calamity/After the Calamity:

At age 43 Alexandra and her husband were called to take up arms against the Garlean Empire and travel to Cartenau. As the two of them hugged Audrey goodbye, she steelled herself for the end. Unbeknownst to her it would be highly unlikely for her to meet that fate as she wore the same earring imbued with life saving magic as Audrey. As she bled out in the fields of Carteneau, the last thing she saw was the lifeless body of her husband.

She woke up barely lucid in makeshift medbays in the area of Mor Dhona. Her shoulder and leg prevented her from moving, something she worsened with her multiple attempts to leave. After the battle she was moved back to Gridania with the other wounded. Reuniting with Cordelia, Alexandra learned that the West Shroud had been consumed by flames. Her daughter was nowhere to be found. Despite being nearly unable to walk she searched herself, tearing her wounds open multiple times.

Finally seeing the destruction of the West Shroud and unable to reach their home she believed Audrey to be dead.

Heartbroken, she couldn't bear to live in Gridania anymore. Alongside Cordelia, the two of them made their way to Kugane, living mostly in the city proper. Unsure if she would even be able to continue wielding her bow with how much she fought the healing process, Alexandra pushed herself despite injury and age. Retreating back to her solitary lifestyle, most of her time was spent in Yanxia. Up until they were pushed out of Kugane she placed a target on her back killing Garlean patrols.

Reunion/Present Day: Can wield a lance although those skills are much more rusty.

Backstory:

Childhood:

Growing up realizing the life they were robbed of, he made it his life's goal to return to their village. Around the age of 15 he left the West Shroud to try and return "home". Sadly they never got much further than the outer edges of the forest and the nearby Thanalan and/or Mor Dhona. Even still, they refused to return to the West Shroud.

Seeing Dalamud loom closer and the world enveloped by chaos, he returned to the West Shroud to fulfill a promise he made to Audrey and see her to safety. Finding her trapped and dying, he rescued her from the Shroud, heading to Ul'dah.

For the next 4 years they would care for her in her comatose state, becoming an arena fighter and mercenary. He covered up his face and ears to not stand out, eventually earning the pit name 'Heavensmaker'. The plan was to save up enough money and take the two of them to the village he was born in. Though when the time came, they realized that in her unconscious state he would be doing the exact same thing his mother did if he were to take her away from Eorzea. And so he placed her on a carriage to Gridania, and wished her the best...

Getting to the village however, they turned him away as an outsider, telling him that even if he were to be accepted into their tribe they would never get to live in the city because they were a man. So the next 2 years were spent trying to get back to Eorzea. The only thing on his mind, having dedicated 9 years of his life for a village that didn't want him, was to retrieve Audrey and return to Ul'dah. He wasn't going to live in the Shroud and was too unfamiliar with any other place. Figuring that if he could take Audrey to their home in Ul'dah, tell her all that's happened, she would of course agree and decide to live with him.

Cordelia left with them and arrived in Eorzea while they were only 2 summers old. Audrey was 4 at the time and quickly saw him as a younger brother with Alexandra deciding to help the inexperienced and helpless Cordelia.

Current age: 25

Status: Single (good luck)

Hobbies: Playing the Harp, Ballroom dancing, Research, Indulging on anything fancy

Backstory:

Childhood:

At the age of 9 Ancrene stumbled across a mysterious object during a family trip, washed up in a dying stream. She had taken it, and carelessly pried it open while back with her family. The only thing inside was a dagger. Days after they returned home, her mother, father, and siblings mysteriously grew ill, except for her. Countless healers and scholars tried to figure out what disease/curse had befallen them and why only Ancrene was immune to it. Through laborious efforts the disease was able to be quelled, but forever confined her family to bed rest; they would all one day die if no cure was found. Unwilling to take up the mantle as head of her house, Ancrene studied for 7 long years all that she could in medicine, religion, and history.

Selfishness drove her to save her family- she risked driving her house to ruin as the last healthy heir, [set off on a mission to find a healer and bring them back at any cost.] (eh idk). In the end, she discovered the terrible truth, the dagger [see below] and in the end, she was transformed. It was shortly after her sixteenth birthday that Ancrene was able to pry open the daggers' terrible secret.

The dagger held a voidsent inside and gave her an offer. It would lift the curse on her family but only in exchange for the life of another, her. She rejected the offer.

"I spent my entire childhood looking for a cure so I wouldn't have to deal with the chore of being the head of the household. I just want a life of luxury without any of the hassle. Do you really think I'm going to waste years worth of knowledge, years worth of discovery and innovation in the world of magicks for some bodies I barely know!? No. I choose me, everytime. If I have to have a little bit of responsibility on my plate to continue my life of grandeur, so be it."

“Interesting. You leave your family to perish then. Well then, enjoy your wealth...but I think I’ll leave you with one more parting gift... A monstrous appearance for a monstrous girl.”

No longer a Hyur in appearance, healers are unsure whether to classify her as part dragon, Au’ra, or something entirely different. She sits now at the start of her journey as the leader and sole member of her family, disease and Calamity wiping the rest away. In the time after her transformation she met Rokoko. He has now become a father figure to the childish 20 year old

Backstory:

Early Life:

Once a teacher, the school she worked in was charred by a great wyrm, rendering June blind in her left eye, her life's work destroyed, and most of her students killed. She travels the Coerthan landscape seeking revenge. Only then will she go back to the quiet life of a scholar.

Anyone from Ishgard will most likely be familiar with June. A tall, refined, serious woman who is known for her skill both academically and on the field of battle. Acting head of the Charboneau house, there are quite a few threads of gossip to be found about her. When her brother is old enough, she will step down and let him take her spot as the head of the household.

Since dragons are pals after HSW she probably kills the dragon before then.

Her father was killed before the Calamity when she was only 22 summers. Her younger brother was only 2. Now 15 summers old, June still has a few years left to oversee her house's success.

June met Guenièvre when she was 16 summers. Started to transition when she was 20. Started dating Guenièvre when she was 23. June married her wife when she was 26 years old. This marks her 10th anniversary.

Backstory:

Early Life:

The chosen of her village to acquire knowledge of the outside world, she decided on the name Velvet once she got to Eorzea. It was the thought of finding her aunt and cousin alongside her own desire to know about the world that drove her to work towards being selected. She hasn't really talked about her village, though she does miss her sisters sometimes. However the greater world and the sights it has to offer was worth it in her eyes. Barely a fraction into her life, she wants to see as many of the beautiful sights the world has to offer as she can.

Having met up with the party in Heavensward Velvet picked up some Machinist skills while in Ishgard, partially due to thinking technology was interesting enough to learn of but to also handle the dragon's tough armor often impenetrable by bows.

After Estel was born, Audrey made Velvet his godmother. When they finally made it back to Gridania she helped take care of the two as her neighbor. She had a tough time getting her to go out at first, but seeing her friend get better and better fills her with unimaginable joy. As her job is mostly in the morning, she looks after Estel whenever Audrey needs to go somewhere a task she's overjoyed to do as she loves children).

Now that the world has settled down and Audrey settled into a good life she has continued her world traveling. Never gone for too long she always brings back souvenirs of her travels. While she may one day return momentarily to return what knowledge of the outside she has acquired, Velvet plans to spend as long as she can in the outside world. Perhaps she'll return in the next two centuries for good- if she finds herself satisfied with her exploration.

Her real name is Kajsa.

Clive Hyrst

Race/Clan: Hyur/

Current age: 13

One of Audrey's students. Brash and confident in his skills, he still has plenty of manners. Clive's mother is a Wood Wailer while his father is a Botanist. Ever since he was young he wanted to learn healing magic. He hopes that one day he can earn a White Mages soulstone.

Laurette Taurelin

Race/Clan: Mixed Duskwight/Wildwood

Age: 14

One of Audrey's students. Her mother works in the Sanctum of the Twelve and her father is a conjurer. Laurette respects the Elementals, but sees the potential for great change in Gridania as a society. Out of the three, is the most interested with non magical healing.

Maral

Race/Clan: Au Ra/Xaela

Age: estimated to be 12

One of Audrey's students. She was found by the Wood Wailers as a baby, her parents' bodies not far. Soft spoken and shy the other two often overshadow her in Conversation. She looks up to Audrey and a fellow Au ra living in the Shroud named Sola Gritt. She started conjury at age 11.

Lucien Rheault

Race/Clan: Elezen/

Age: 53

A White Mage long thought to have perished at the Battle of Carteneau. One of the few to be given a soulstone in the Sixth Astral Era alongside Cecil Valentine. He worked in the shadows to bring change to the Twelveswood through the use of force. Using the Lambs of Dalamud he lead them away from magic and summoning and instead gave them weapons to kill any outsiders that violated the laws of the Twelveswood. The weapons he provided were coated in Concentrated spores from Amdapor that would prevents healing of any inflicted wounds. As his actions went more and more unnoticed he grew bolder, striking out against corrupt Gridanians.

After the Calamity he discovered that his soulstone would no longer attune to him. Having heard of Audrey's actions and company she kept Lucien deemed that she was no longer fit to wield the power of a White Mage. And so he planned to kill her as well; it was only thanks to the bravery of her students that the Lambs of Dalamud were not able to remove her enchanted earring that would keep her alive against the wounds inflicted on her.

Lucien's belief is one of the laws of Gridania turned to the extreme. He plans to rid the Shroud of all those who go against the law of the Elementals. Gathering items related to ancient Amdapor and other supplies he can find, he uses the easily persuaded cult members to carry out his bidding until they are no longer of use. Emboldened by Gridania's lack of investigation for his actions- only targeting poachers and other lawbreakers at first- he slowly starts to strike out against more and more "common" folk. Once he has a White Mage soul stone that will resonate with him he can finally step out from the shadows. He knows of Audrey, because of who is his, and finds it repulsive that she would (in his eyes) break the laws of the Elementals. Of course he has no clue of her direct communication with them and would probably not believe her.

After he gets her soulstone he can control Amdapor technology (used as boss battles)
