

Session 2

Today, we continue the lecture from our Legacy Speaker, Dr. Yohuru Williams. In this session, we discuss how we can support change in the world around us. Dr. Williams explores the foundations necessary for creating and sustaining this work, referring to it as "the soil of our community." He speaks about the many people involved in creating change, from organizers to the protectors of movements, and the important roles they play. Dr. Williams highlights the importance of understanding yourself and your strengths so that you can bring the best support possible to a movement. He also encourages us to look beyond the movement leader and recognize the many individuals working behind the scenes who help make meaningful change happen.
