

“Monsters exist, but they are too few in number to be truly dangerous. More dangerous are the common men, the functionaries ready to believe and to act without asking questions.”

— Primo Levi

In August of 1945, the first titan was discovered, it had spikey dorsal fins that went from its head to tail, five-fingered claws, and a thunderous roar, it was discovered in Antarctica, by a few hikers. One hiker was called “Daisuke Serizawa”, or, “Ishiro Serizawa” but, the titan wasn’t alone. It was fighting another monster... the other monster was red in color, had scales everywhere around its body, and two, crescent moon-shaped ears. The red monster dug away as the spiked monster roared in victory. Two months later, they reported the creatures to the organization; Monarch which had been searching for these things for five years, Monarch gave the spiked monster the name “Gojira” while the red monster had the name “Baragon”. In 1947 a new threat appeared... “King Ghidorah”
