

Photos from Gooseberry Mesa - Yellow Man and Windmill Trails - Tuesday, May 28

New Promise Hikers visited Gooseberry Mesa on Tuesday, May 28. It was a beautiful day. As expected, the road leading to the Yellow Man pictograph site was the greatest challenge of the day, but it was still passable. It was of course very nice to visit the Yellow Man. The road to Windmill Trailhead was in the process of being scraped by a road grader while we were using it. The road was in fabulous shape! At Windmill Trailhead, we indulged in a hike past the Gooseberry Yurts to a viewpoint showing the length and breadth of the Kolob and West Rim of Zion. Though there was some haze (of course), the views were still wonderful.
