

Rubric for Missionary Discipleship

(For each row, circle the box that most accurately describes your community)

	My Mission			God's Mission
Prayer, Liturgy and Contemplation	Prayer, liturgy, and contemplation play little or no role in the community.	Prayer, liturgy, and contemplation are somewhat present but do not clearly guide the service and outreach.	Prayer, liturgy, and contemplation sometimes guides the service and outreach of the missionary community	Prayer, liturgy, and contemplation clearly and regularly guide the service and outreach of the missionary community.
Discernment and solidarity	Missionaries do little to no discernment about how they are called to serve.	Missionaries discern activity as individuals but not as a community.	Missionaries discern as a community but not with their neighbors on the margins.	Missionaries discern action as a community AND with their neighbors on the margins.
Encounter and relationship	Missionaries have little to no encounter and relationship with people on the margins.	Missionaries sometimes meet their neighbors on the margins but do not seem to form genuine relationships .	Missionaries occasionally meet and develop relationships with their neighbors on the margins.	Missionaries regularly meet and develop relationships with their neighbors on the margins.
Witness	Missionary activity has little to no examples of living, loving, and serving as Jesus and the early Christians did.	Missionary activity has a few examples of living, loving, and serving as Jesus and the early Christians did.	Missionary activity seems mostly modeled on how Jesus and the early Christians lived, loved, and served.	Missionary activity is clearly modeled on living, loving, and serving as Jesus and the early Christians did.
Proclamation and dialogue	Missionaries enter into little or no meaningful dialogue with those they encounter.	Missionaries either share their faith without listening, or listen to others without sharing their own faith.	Missionaries enter into some dialogue in which they listen to and share their faith with those they encounter.	Missionaries enter into meaningful dialogue in which they listen to and share their faith with those they encounter.
Justice, peace, and care of creation	Missionary community does little to no work to address social injustice and build a more just society.	Missionary community does some work to address injustice but does not seem committed to the principles of CST .	Missionary community works somewhat to address causes of injustice and to build a just society based on the principles of CST.	Missionary community works consistently to address injustice and build a just society based on the principles of Catholic Social Teaching.

