

Prof Gunturu Revathi is Head of Clinical Microbiology at the Aga Khan University Hospital, Nairobi.

Strong academic and scientific background with over 150 publications on Salmonellosis, Antimicrobial Resistance in various bacterial pathogens, Helicobacter pylori, Infectious Diseases in Children (H-Index 40)

Professional Experience in several famous institutions such as Cytology Research Center, New Delhi, the Dept of Microbiology at the Maulana Azad Medical College, and the University College of Medical Sciences, New Delhi, the Head of the Department of Laboratory Medicine at the Kenyatta National Hospital and Faculty of the Department of Medical Microbiology at the College of Health Sciences, University of Nairobi, Collaborating Scientist at the Center for Microbiology Research, Kenya Medical Research Institute, Nairobi.

Member of several International professional bodies such as ISID, ESCMID, KACP, APECSA, and ERS. Member of various National Committees such Technical advisory committee for National Program for Tuberculosis and Leprosy, National Committee on Infection Prevention and Control, National Antimicrobial Stewardship Committee, Kenya National Committee on Infectious and Parasitic Diseases Research Program (IPDRPC), National Working Group for Clinical Management and Referral guidelines of Ministry of Health, Global Antimicrobial Resistance Partnership (GARP)

Recipient of several Research Grants such as the DFG grant for ShARE project, Fleming Fund Country Grant for Lab capacity building for AMR