

Explore Olympic Sculpture Park: Seattle's Premier Outdoor Art Experience

Located along Seattle's iconic waterfront, Olympic Sculpture Park is a free and open public space that blends art, nature, and breathtaking views into a truly unique experience. Managed by the Seattle Art Museum, this nine-acre park is a must-visit Point of Interest (POI) for anyone exploring the city, offering a peaceful escape in the heart of Seattle.

A Fusion of Art and Landscape

What sets Olympic Sculpture Park apart from traditional museums is its open-air design. The park features a thoughtfully designed green space where visitors can walk among large-scale contemporary sculptures by world-renowned artists such as Alexander Calder, Louise Bourgeois, and Richard Serra. These monumental works are displayed in harmony with the park's natural setting, allowing guests to experience art without walls—while surrounded by native plants, scenic walkways, and waterfront views.

Perfect for locals and tourists alike, the park showcases how urban design and public art can work together to create an inclusive space for reflection, education, and recreation.

Free, Accessible, and Open Year-Round

One of the greatest benefits of Olympic Sculpture Park is that it is completely free to visit. Open 365 days a year, it's ideal for a quick stop or a full afternoon of exploration. The park is easily accessible by foot, bike, or public transit and is conveniently located near popular Seattle neighborhoods like Belltown, Downtown, and the Seattle Center.

Whether you're planning a family outing, a romantic sunset stroll, or a quiet solo walk, Olympic Sculpture Park offers a serene escape from the urban hustle without leaving the city.
