Notes:

In a fanfic within which being a metamorph actually does make you biologically immortal, and where magicals never stop getting stronger with age— where there are canonical beings that are older than civilization already; I'll take being the first homo sapien, the literal first modern human in history.. and also the first magical human, first veela, and first metamorph. After all, Graduate will let me set my age to whatever I want.

I'm actually only using the DLC for Sociopathy and Orphan, for their additional eleven points; but Lyra (the main character of the fanfic) is a sociopath as well, so that's not too shabby— and no shit, my parents are dead; have been for half a million years. I'm going to fake being a Black metamorph, faking being an eleven year old Hogwarts first year, not that people won't notice me, eventually; but really I'm going to help Lyra save the Black family.

I'm a once in a civilization genius at all things DADA, that can't forget anything DADA related; and I imagine I've already grown out of all of my weaknesses, what with Immature assuring me that I'm as skilled as my age suggests— that being old as dirt, insanely good at everything, and in it for my own amusement, if any of the other three pre-civilization beings are anything to go by... all of which are gods.

There's the Green Lady, a mage out of Egypt that apparently invented arithmancy; there's The Dark, and it's Avatar, Angelos Black, who is the god of all things evil, but is only a few centuries old; and there's a nature goddess that's about twelve thousand years old, that's described as 'maybe or maybe not being the oldest entity on earth; but definitely being the strongest mind mage'; so I figure eclipsing that record by forty times should do something for my power— and likely make me the first god, aswell.

Also, because I took Peaceful, I'm just already able to cast silent, wandless, invisible Fiendfyre, that can't be contained by magic, and has homing I perfectly control... so there is that. Maybe I'm a god of fire? And rebirth? Probably at least something to do with Life, given all modern humans are my descendants. I'll also take being the first phoenix, if that'll do.
