The National Human Trafficking & Disability Work Group is committed to centering the voices, experiences, and expertise of trafficking survivors with disabilities. Accessibility and trauma informed approaches are woven throughout all initiatives. To accomplish this, each element of our work is built atop pillars of safety, belonging and dignity. NHTDWG actively seeks to include and support the participation of survivors with disabilities, whose perspective and leadership is foundational to our work. We cultivate an atmosphere of belonging through appropriate accommodations and ample opportunities for survivors to meaningfully shape NHTDWG spaces/advocacy. When survivors speak/share, we listen deeply and strive to assure safety. We recognize and respect the dignity of all survivors, a position reflected throughout proactive efforts to prevent erasure, exploitation or any other harmful/extractive practices. Upon joining the working group, all members become supporters of collective safety, bridges toward belonging and dedicated to honoring everyone's inherent dignity.
