1. Introduction

The introduction contains the background to the research, study, or plan described in this scientific paper. The title of the introduction is written in 12-point bold. Citations follow APA style.

Try using an online reference manager (Mendeley, EndNote, Zotero, or another) or the reference menu in an MS Word file. If you have difficulty using these reference managers, you can use the manual method. If using the manual method, citations still follow APA style.

2. Materials and Methods

2.1. Materials

2.2. Methods

Informs the type of research, for example survey or experiment, informs the factors studied, responses, stages and methods of drawing conclusions.

2.3. Analysis Data

State what kind of data analysis you have been using during the experiments as well as any software analysis.

3. Results and Discussions

3.1. Sub-section for results & discussion

3.2. Sub-section for results & discussion

Tables should be written in 10-point Times New Roman and placed single-spaced below the table title. Table 1 titles should be written in 9-point bold and placed above the table. Tables should be numbered using Arabic numerals. Tables should be single-spaced between paragraphs. If the title in each column of the table is long and complex, the columns should be numbered, and their captions should be provided at the bottom of the table (Anestis et al., 2015).

Figures are placed immediately after their designation in the manuscript. Figures are numbered and arranged using Arabic numerals. Figure captions are placed below the figure and spaced one space apart from the figure. Figure captions are written using 9pt, bold font. The distance between the figure caption and the paragraph is double-spaced. Figures that have been published by other authors must have written permission from the author and the publisher. Figure 1 will be printed in black and white.

4. Conclusion

The conclusion is not made in the form of a sub-chapter but is written at the end of the text before the bibliography, which is the essence that answers the research objectives.

5. Acknowledgement

It's addressed to the funding agency, citing the research contract. It can also be addressed to parties who assisted in the smooth running of the research.

6. Authors contribution
