

Use the following video to respond to the questions?

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7jkkLCRsRCc>

Why focus on the html part of a webpage before you begin using css?

What happen to the “center” tag?

Why would you want to avoid using tags such as the “center” tag?

Why separate style from structure? Which is your structure and which is css?

html elements are made up of?

When you put css in the head section, this is considered what kind of css?

What element is used when using css in the head section of an html file?

We used comments in html, what did the comment look like?

What does a comment in css look like?

What is the very first thing that is written for a css rule? What example did he use for this part of css?

What is the symbol used to hold (surround) the properties and values of a css statement?

In css, what separates the property and the value?

Together what is a property and a value called?

What was used at the end of each of the combinations of property:value?

Show an example of css being used internally: