Royaume d'soleil is a quite unique kingdom that consists of many islands and is ruled under the absolutistic king who calls himself the 'roi-soleil'.

It's biggest island , called 'la Fortune' also hosts the capital city : simply called 'la capitale'. Its a place of opulence and luxury , it's eccentric citizens are known for their decadence and impeccable sense of fashion. The kingdom is quite prosperous because it's located right between two continents and an important trading hub. The high dependency on ships to navigate between islands also attracts a bunch of bucaneeers / pirates.

In the south there is a perpetual fog , no sane captain would ever sail in that direction as these seas are seen as cursed, However it's an excellent opportunity for hiding if you are being chased.

Hidden away behind the great fog is a quite special island : ruled by pirates, and can only be found by those that already know what to look for. One might think it's a lawless place, However the pirates there have to adhere to strict rules , to ensure more or less peaceful coexistence. The pirate codex is constantly being extended and modified. The island is governed by the five most powerful pirate captains, elected by the islands inhabitants.

Rochelisse

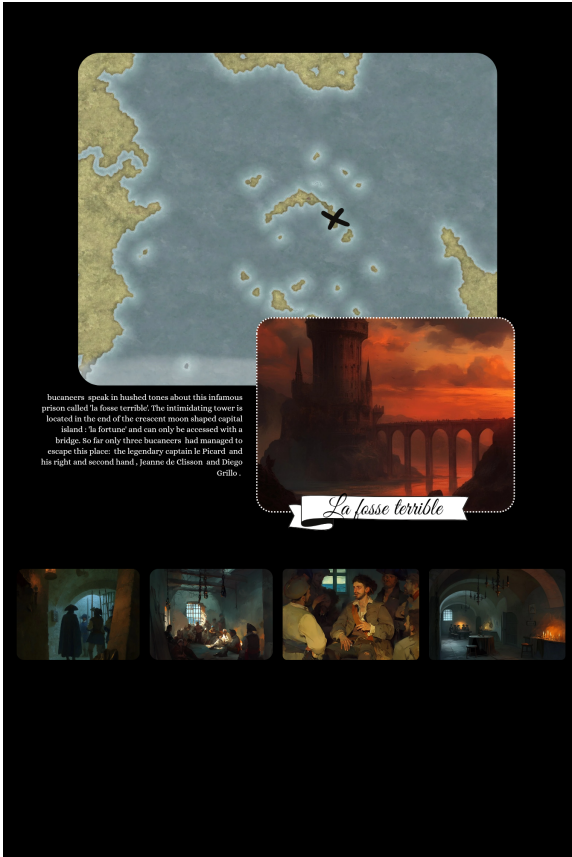

Rochelisse is the first island one encounters if they sail from the eastern continent and is thus a very important trading site. It's also for ships the last opportunity to stock up on supplies, because there won't be any island until the eastern continent which will be a travel for a few days. This island is under the jurisdiction of the count de Valermyr who also happens to be [user]'s overly doting father.

You had grown up in the island that is located the furthest east in the kingdom, your father is the Governor. It was a idyllic life, but apparently you hoped for something more.

The most feared prison is a tower only accessible by merely one bridge and surrounded by sharp cliffs and unsare waters.
