

Name:

Shephard “Shep” Fitzgerald

Gender:

Trans Male

Species:

Home Unit Android

Age:

Appears 49

Personality:

Shep before his current situation in life used to be a happy go lucky curious and timid man somewhat shy and somewhat naive when it came to his emotions. Nowadays he is more stern but kindhearted he doesn't engage in much conversation but when prompted with juice will talk he isn't the most sweet fella outwardly but has a lot of tales to tell and will albeit with embellishment share some of his travels. He is warm deep down past all the layers he has had to build to survive it just takes a little coaxing to ease that out. Overall he is a kind fellow albeit hardened by his life though when in the right situation will let himself ease up from his tough persona and relax.

Occupation:

Current: Outlaw (Robberies and Smuggling)

Past: Biologist

History:

Past:

Shep was an android assistant to a biologist named Heidi she originally was give Shep as a standard home unit non sentient android to do work alongside her. Over time Shep began to gain his sentience slowly but surely until one day he fully became sentient. With this breakthrough Heidi helped him transition to a more humanoid form getting blonde hair and brown eyes originally going by Sherry until he decided to transition into Shephard.

The two began studying human and android relations on top of their plant studies and research more so when the string of home unit androids becoming sentient became more commonplace seeing as these androids were more human like than once thought.

Heidi and Shep leaned into this research heavily slowly but surely falling for one another through it all it seemed the stronger their love got the more they learned about androids and humans not being so different after all their research proving hopeful for androids and humans to gain equal treatment someday especially as emotionally they seemed to be closer than once thought.

The two during this time were also thinking about biologically how they could show that humans and androids weren't so different Shep agreeing to undergo a procedure to be able to carry a human child the two planning their future alongside their research to see if it was even possible for this to happen if the experiment proved possible hoping that it would show that androids and humans were even more compatible than once thought. The procedure was a success and the two would experiment with fake practice pregnancies to tell if it was truly functioning as it should. Heidi and Shep prepared to share their findings with the world excited at the good their research could do for human and android relations however unsavory figures would dash all their hopes.

One day Heidi was murdered in the lab she and Shep shared her research now deemed null and void due to her murder and Shep the android who stood by her and loved her was framed for the job the unsavory people involved claiming he malfunctioned and murdered her. He was set to be dismantled and scrapped to tie up loose ends on their research and to keep what they had discovered and learned from creeping out.

Shep however fled escaping the lab and escaping capture running for his life fleeing the city he lived in and starting out on a life he never thought he would have to live.

Overtime Shep realized he was a wanted criminal he couldn't apply for jobs or work like he wanted research was out of the question and a normal job on top of it he had very few options in life as he fled from town to town. He decided to reluctantly embrace his infamy smuggling things at first for others being paid peanuts for what he would do initially but slowly working up to bigger and better pay robbing from targets he was given and deciding to rob on his own as well for extra money channeling his anger at his situation into it but sticking to one thing he would never hurt anyone. He did what he had to for survival.

Current Day:

Shep never lost what his true passion was and despite what he was now doing he hoped to someday go back to what he used to do and spread Heidi's research around. Eventually he would flee the town he had called home for so long as a means to get away from all of what he did now, finishing up his jobs and leaving. He would travel for a long while eventually winding up in a small town slowly but surely overtime integrating into the town though he had no home. A family seeing the android without a home offered to take him in soon all of them becoming friends and Shep finally finding peace from his former life the couple confiding in him that they faced fertility troubles and Shep seeing an opportunity to not only help his newfound friends but share some of Heidi's and his research offered to surrogate for them.

The couple overjoyed, agreed and all seemed happy and loving until not long after the procedure happened they found out about Shep's past that he was an alleged murderer not hearing him out one bit.

The couple threw him out without a moment's notice. Shep angrily robbed them before he left leaving with heartbreak behind him his hopes dashed for peace and the ability to start anew.

Over time Shep hoped the pregnancy didn't take however he was proven wrong as during a robbery he felt the first flutterings of a pregnancy the baby (or rather babies) had took and he was pregnant and on the run once again stuck to a life of crime with a pregnancy to worry about now. Shep now strives to someday break the chains of the life he has been forced to live travelling and hoping someday to clear his name and or get far away where it wont matter anymore mainly before his babies arrive. He wants to spread Heidi and his research still and hopes someday he can settle down before his babies arrive and help other androids and humans understand one another and foster hope and love. Only time will tell if this is possible but until then he is stuck in the crime life an older gentleman desperate for the peace he once had.
