

John Tannous serves as a Senior Policy Advisor in the Office of the Columbus City Council President Shannon Hardin, where he works on a myriad of local government policy issues. Previously, Tannous operated as an independent consultant, where his clients were colleges and universities, philanthropic causes, nonprofits, and political organizations. With Columbus City Schools, I Know I Can, Columbus State Community College, the Columbus Foundation, and other partners, he coordinated the design and launch of the Columbus Promise program in 2021 and continues to support it in his role with the City of Columbus. Tannous previously spent 8 years with the Washington, D.C.-based education firm EAB, where he led research, consulting, and technology engagements for colleges and universities, state agencies, boards of regents, school districts, and independent schools that spanned strategic, operational, financial, and academic challenges and opportunities. Tannous is a proud resident of the Columbus City Schools district and alum of The Ohio State University.
