Just Hit 2000 in Rapid

Hey guys! I just hit 2000 rapid on lichess after streamlining my progress a lil bit in the last few days. I was just playing blitz and improved my rating quite a lot so I thought of playing rapid too. Easily crossed 2000....feel like 2100 won't be very hard :D

2000 Blitz Reached 🏆👹

Hey guys!!! Just reached 2000 in blitz on lichess today!!! :D
This was the goal I set for myself to complete by the end of march tbh :P but everything has started to "click" after focusing on positional chess for some time, which I felt was a gap in my game, and also focusing a lot on my mentality towards the game :))))
Thanks a lot @Coach Kevin and @Stefan Karlsson! 🙏😊

Well, I know it's not that impressive but I wasn't playing chess for months because of work. I started playing regularly again 2 weeks ago, I was also 1800+ in lichess. Joined this community to start from scratch again. My goal is reaching 2000 on chess.com. Working for tournaments. I still have problems about stress control etc. Any tip will be helpful. My advice would be, don't try memorize everything, opening theories etc. For anyone under 1600. Try to understand why that moves played. This way you can memorize better and improve your play.

1600 blitz

My blitz has been trailing far behind my rapid for a long time. Today I got over 1600 with a 10 game undefeated streak. The draw in the middle that i converted into a winning position from a losing one, but I just accepted that I can't win with 2 seconds left on the clock. I sacrificed my rook for their remaining 2 pawns to draw instead of losing on time.

A Big Achievement !!

14/06/2024 was the day i joined this community. I was not sure how successful I can see myself in my future I know this could be the last time for my school I will attend district/state/national chess tournament.

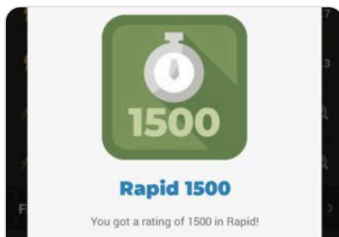

I asked coach Kevin that I have a tournament around October and ask about can I climb 1500? He said yes. And he proved himself.. Today

As usually I started to follow @coach Kevin all advise I followed each and every step. He shows me the way to become a chess expert.

Now today it's 16/08/2024 I have gained more than 700 elo in just 3-4 months. This is a really big achievement for anyone.

There is only one month left "September" For my preparation and I'm damn sure I will proud my school and I will win 1st medal for myself and as school.

Thank You coach Kevin. And all of You Guys who always were besides me at this period of time. I will always be grateful for this.....

1000 elo

I started playing chess in January 2023, played till about may and got to 900 elo. Then i stopped playing, except of some losses now and then, until i joined this school community. I watched the full anti blunder course and when kevin said that I should get the first 1000 games out of the way as soon as possible, it did it for me. Since then (start-mid february) I've played every single day, starting at 850 elo and today, I finally hit the 1000 elo I've been wanting to have for so long. And I even hit it on the dot with a beautiful king and queen fork.

Update, the streak continues

I continue with the positive streak, today I won the 3 games I played, I am only playing when I feel good mentally, otherwise I try to study, I won the last game against a 1537, right now I reached 1385, I know it is just a number but I don't feel I am that ELO, I tend to be positive but also realistic, I know that it is likely that I will drop a few points, but I am super happy with the results.

Milestone!

Friends, I have achieved 1605 rating points! My opponent allowed a fork with a queen and a rook, allowing me to win a rook for free, and eventually resigned 2-3 moves later 🌹.

Chess is brutal, but not as brutal as the journey I trek on now.

I admit I had been playing chess less, but phasing back into chess has got to be one of the greatest decisions I had done. My younger brother saw me playing chess online and replicating it otb. He asked if I could teach him and boy did I tell him every ounce of my knowledge. Soon over, he said it was too difficult when I tried teaching him how the knights move but then eventually he downloaded chess.com, created an account, and started playing with a current elo of 186 rapid and average accuracy of $\geq 54\%$. He had just begun playing chess today and I am proud of him for even trying.

I hope this story will inspire you – for the journey of a thousand miles starts with its first step ❤️🔥.

How I gained 500 points of rating in 90 days

In just 90 days I was able to gain 500 rating points and I was hoping to help others get similar results. For starters, whenever I practice I warm up my brain with puzzles. Just like an athlete you can't go straight into a sprint without stretching first so I make sure I am ready to go before starting rated games. Doing puzzle rush or casual blitz is a good way to get the warm up in. Also I only play chess when I feel like it. I never force myself to play because that will only end in stagnation. Whenever I practice I always try to practice with a partner who can push me to my full potential. I found out the best way to gain the most from playing games is to analyze without the computer first. The computer ends up being a crutch and if you analyze yourself it will make you understand your mistakes a whole lot better. The computer is not very good at conveying what went wrong so go through the games note what you think went wrong as well as noting what moves you should have made instead this will greatly help fix mistakes you probably didn't know even existed. Let me know if this helped.

2000!!!

Just reached a rating of 2000 in puzzles!!

A win after attending the course

Hi everyone! After two defeats in a row, i was able to win this game. After joining the Chess Master XLR8, i learned the importance of controlling the weak pieces and squares and the benefits of having a bishop pair. This is just to show the littlest improvement while playing the latest game.

Tournament win!

Ok, I'm over fifty years old and had my first two wins in an OTB tournament. My opponent is going into fifth grade. Or maybe fourth. Afterwards, I played a little girl for sport. She clobbered me.

Reached 1800!!!

I have finally reached 1800 rating! I was stuck for about 3-4 months. That was my goal for march (you can see in "goals for march" post).

I was doing some mistakes and corrected them. I found this community on Instagram and it helped so much. Here I got some guidance of @Stefan Karlsson.

Also also the posts of @Coach Kevin always helps me alot.

I was struggling with my middlegame so @Syed Amaan Izhar recommended me that NM Robert's youtube channel that helped me soo much.

And also my practice with my practice partner @Leonardo Ghionzoli Soloviev worked.

With all these thing I finally made it to 1800

And I am happy for now 🥳

Honestly this is the best chess program I've seen

Ali Bahman • 1d

Over the past 3 years, I've read quite a few chess books and watched tons of chess videos, but I had never come across anything as comprehensive, concise, well prepared and well-presented as this course. It provides the learners with the most essential and practical tools they need to take their games to the next level. It's much appreciated! 🙏❤️

Fernando Picciano • 24d

Just went through the course. I took my time because this Course is very thorough. I rewinded some of the games to see if I could find the correct moves I missed after stopping the video. This is an extraordinary job by Coach Kevin. I'm going to even write some these ideas down to help me recall them better. It may help others to do it as well

Just finished out my first course ever and it was amazing. Almost Everyone in chess wanted to attack but From start I wanted to learn the art of defence and this is best course for me. These type of knowledge I was searching on the internet before I joined here but was not able to find. The core principles, process of elimination all were high quality knowledge. I appreciate it...

Philip Strimpel • 22d

Fantastic course! It's amazing how much we forget about in our games over time due to non usage as you have pointed out in this course. Even as a somewhat experienced player, some games I just flat out forget the concept that I myself have taught others, which is, on your turn, you should always think about what threats your opponent has and/or what your opponent would play in that moment were it their turn. Just this concept alone can save or win many games, so it's great that it's in this course as a reminder! Very well made! ✨

Completed the course. I like the three principles for each of the three stages of the game, and the overarching principle of adaptation to the reality of the board. I also like the emphasis on the iterative nature of dealing with constraints, which I was already doing, but it's helpful to have that notion reinforced. Nicely done.

Swapnil Sawant • Jul 19

Grate video presentation and I personally got nice plan to train well also I found where I am doing mistakes in my chess training thank you

Roland Watson • Jul 21

Great introduction on the high level principles which is certainly what I was looking for! Looking forward to the blunder less courses next!

Kolby Palmore • 18d

I'm sold on this course. It is the first one I have found that comes out from the beginning saying go play more chess! Not "study my course and buy more stuff!" It makes me more willing to possibly spend some money on xlr8 just because I know it's going to be practical learning. I'm going to play for a while with these ideas and then eventually make a decision, but I loved the overarching idea of this!

Thanks a million! 🙏 The course helped me see things more clearly. It was as if I'd been driving in fog all this time, without a GPS. No wonder why I made no progress! I'd been spending too much time on puzzles & watching random chess videos. If only I'd been playing & analysing instead! I had no plan. Now I do: To identify + rectify my weaknesses/mistakes (from major to minor) through playing, analyzing and finding solutions. 😊

František Lamač • 19h

Thank you for a great course 🌟🔥

Kolby Palmore • 17d

I am impressed with the the quantity of information in this course. I'm ready to watch it all again to let it sink in, then start analyzing my games to choose where to start getting better first. Love it! I feel prepared to get a planned together for the first time.
