

Kaja Kallas- We had an extensive discussion about these issues today. The world is clearly changing and that's why the strategic alignment of the common foreign security policy for our partners is extremely important. With whom you really are? Right now, Armenia's alignment is 37%.

So yes, the sanctions that we have put down on Russia, of course that is difficult, but we have also asked this from our partnership countries because we all want this war to end. I think the effect of this war and all our economies is big and that's why we put sanctions to end this war.

That's why we ask our partners to ally with them. And that's why we also provide the possibilities to diversify the train portfolios. So you are not dependent on the Russian economy, really. But this is the world we see right now.

But we're all struggling. We need to see this war end, that's why we have sanctions in place. And if everybody really implements the sanction, there is no convention the sooner we end this war because one party runs out of means to finance it.
