New York Central Art Supply Warehouse Sale Starts Today

New York Central Art Supply is pleased to announce the start of its first ever Warehouse Clearance Sale.

New York Central — the oldest art supply store in the country — will be clearing out inventory for up to 50% off of its already discounted prices on thousands of items. The New York Central Warehouse, located at 130 E 12th Street between 3rd and 4th Avenue in Manhattan, will be open from 10am to 6pm to accommodate the sale. One of a kind deals will be available on a selection of items throughout the store, with new merchandise being added every day.

Regarding recent rumors that the store — a New York institution — was closing its doors, Mr. Doug Steinberg, a 4th generation representative of the Steinberg family, says "We are 100% NOT closing the business. We are making significant changes to offer more of the unique products and world famous papers that we are known for."

"We have seen many changes in the industry, but we are doubling down on our efforts to provide artists with unique and hard to find materials, include our world famous collection of more than 6000 papers" added Mr. Steinberg.

About New York Central

Founded in 1905, the store has been run by the Steinberg family for 4 generations, helmed by current owner Steven Steinberg.

The store's customer list reads like a who's who of modern artists, including Andy Warhol, Willem deKooning, Frank Stella, Larry Rivers, Cecily Brown, Keith Haring and many more.

New York Central was awarded a "village" award in 2014 by the Greenwich Village Historical Society in recognition of its 100+ years of serving the residents of Greenwich Village, New York and the World.
