Personality

This old tom is a pretty lax cat. Nothing seems to hype him up a lot. His chill demeanor seems to rub off on even the most fierce of cats. He acts like a mediator between disagreements while using carefully picked words. He cares a lot about other cats, which in turn, could be misplaced. Texas is very sensitive when it comes to anger being directed towards him. Instead of getting into a hissing match, he'd rather roll over and be passive.

Texas loves to eat food, almost to the point of selfishness. He is trying to share his meals some more though, even if it means he has one less piece now... Still, he loves the thrill of the hunt. He likes to work on his own when it comes to it though. His hyperfocus works well especially when he rolls up with twelve mice in his mouth! He's scarily oblivious to things that should be obvious to him. Thank goodness Pirate is with him most of the time otherwise this tom would find himself walking into a coyote's jaws without noticing.

On his rare bad days, he'll sneak out of camp and find a quiet place to sit and think. He would disclose his problems to friends, of course, but he doesn't feel like worrying about them too much. With his liking to be secretive with some things, it might be hard for other cats to get him to crack on certain topics. Instead, he'll mostly keep his muzzle glued shut.

History

Barn Life

Texas was born under Arizona and Detroit who were show cats. He and his siblings, Maine and Pennsylvania lived in luxury, having easy access to food and entertainment when needed. All of these easy luxuries were fun and all, but Texas wanted more. His family were happy just being indoor cats but Texas wanted to explore. He was bored of just being let out a few minutes at a time and he wanted the great outdoors. The sun and the sand felt nice to him and he wanted more of it. When it was time for the kittens to be adopted, he was the first to be chosen and luckily for him, his human lived on a farm! Whatever a farm is to Texas anyways, but he'll find that out later. The old human needed a mouser and he needed a cat immediatly and he just loved the idea of a little cat running around.

Over the months, Texas and his human grew a strong bond. He loved working for his human companion. Not only was hunting fun but he was able to eat the mice too? This was great! His human loved his home and his little cat friend, playing and exploring the land whenever they could. His human friend even adorned him with a hat and a bandana. Nothing could be better than this. Time flew, and Texas felt a change in his life once again. One day, his human was cold to the touch and no matter how Texas would try to warm him, he would not stir. Texas, in a panic, started to yowl and yowl to try to wake the man, but it did not work. His yowling attracted neighboring humans who found the old man and took him away from Texas. He did not understand everything that was happening but he knew now that his friend was gone. In his friend's honor, he would protect their home till the end and would never let his love for exploring die out.

Texas lived alone for months until some raggedy-looking cat crawled up to his barn. Texas picked up this cat and dropped him into a water bucket and slapped a mouse in his face. This is a cat he would know to be named Pirate. Texas was so desperate to make friends with this cat. He was so lonely for so long, he didn't really know how to interact with another living being. Texas eventually made friends with the stoic cat he once again had a companion. Pirate had his weird spouts of shyness with him though, Texas just brushed it off as nerves, not knowing what a crush is. The lazy days at the farm then ended when the humans and their dogs claimed their home, driving Texas and Pirate off. Texas was upset that he was driven out of his human's home, but he felt that his human truly lived his heart not the barn. Also, he had his close friend with him so he truly wasn't that lost, just determined to explore and live happily, for Pirate and his human.

Dunes

Texas and Pirate roamed the sandy dunes for a month before they happened to pick up cat scent. Curiously, Texas went ahead and tracked down the trail and encountered the Canyon Colony. Excited to meet more cats, he uninvitedly waltzed over to the wary cats asking for sanctuary, much to Pirate's chagrin. The cats of the Canyon were very wary of the pair, but Texas didn't seem to mind (or didn't care). After staying for a while, surprisingly enough Pirate decided to go through the trials. After Pirate became a Ranger, Texas was truly settled in his new home and attempted to follow behind his pal.

Texas passed his trials to the best of his abilities. The hunting and the sneaking was pretty easy for the tom, fighting, however, was a chore. Still, he was able to pass the trials and Texas was just glad he was able to chill with the cool cats now. Now he and his "pal", Pirate, hangs out with the older cats.
