SBHS Summer Reading

In an open letter to high school students published by the American Association of College Professors, Professor Patrick Sullivan explains that building strength and stamina as a reader is critical to academic success.

As Professor Sullivan notes:

- Students who are ready for college like to read.
- Students who are ready for college have read some good books as well as some important books while they were in high school
- Students who are ready for college read for pleasure.

Patrick, Sullivan. "An Open Letter to Ninth Graders." American Association of University Professors, 5 Jan. 2009, www.aaup.org/article/open-letter-ninth-graders#VzSga10r10L.

To better prepare myself for high school and college or career, I plan to dedicate time this summer to building my strength and stamina as a reader.
