Notes:

General:

- A resume should be no more than one page.
- Always save and send a resume as a pdf file. Make sure your name is in the file name.
- Bullet points should be specific and written as action commands (Ex. “Planned and led...”).

For the title:

- Adding an address is only relevant if applying for local onsite jobs.
- Make sure the email you use is professional looking. No silly words or catchphrases. Best case scenario, the email address is basically your name.

For the objective:

Use this section to tell the organization you're applying to a little about yourself - your job goals and what skills you hope to gain from this job. Highlight a few skills that you will be able to bring to this position. It's ok to be creative about what you bring to the role if you don't have direct past experience. Are you applying for a job in customer service? List your natural friendliness and comfort in talking to people.

For education:

- End dates can be projected if you are still in school.
- Make sure to state if you go to a special high-school (ex. Waldorf, IB School, Math-focused).
- Listing relevant coursework is optional, based on the position for which you're applying. This can be a great way to highlight skills where you have a strong academic background but no direct out-of-classroom experience. Also, in topics where courses are sequential, only highlight the most advanced course (Ex. Calculus).
- You can place in this section other educational experiences (Ex. Exchange programs, educational summer programs/camps, etc.).

For leadership experience:

List in this section any leadership experience you've had. This is a great place to highlight your involvement in school or in your community, and what skills and responsibilities you've gained from your experiences. Examples of proper things to list: Positions on sports teams, clubs, and honors societies, and any mentorship you've performed. If you've participated in any teen programs that build leadership skills, these can be listed here too (Ex. youth groups).

For other relevant experience:

The title of this section should reflect what specific content you will be sharing. This is a good section to highlight holistic experiences that were not strictly educational or professional, but showcase elements that make you a better candidate. Examples of proper things to list: camps, certificates, long travel experiences, intensive volunteering, and gap year programs.

For skills:

This section is a place to show competency and uniqueness. List relevant skills for the position for which you're applying as well as overarching skills that are typically competitive (ex. Coding). To find what skills a particular position is looking for, scan the application itself. If you see a skill listed that you have, list it in your resume.

Examples of good skills to list:

- Languages (list proficiency after each language. Proficiency levels - beginner, intermediate, advanced, fluent, native.)
- Computer skills: Google Suite, Microsoft Suite, coding languages, softwares, website design, marketing platforms
- Trainings: CPR
