Abstract: The abstract consists of the phenomenon within the discipline area; the aims of the article; research methods; findings; and contribution to the discipline of areas of study. Abstract should be written in English in 150-200 words at maximum.
Keywords: Keywords (maximum of 5) consist of words or phrases that best describe the important terms of the article.

INTRODUCTION
This section describes the phenomena or issues and problems that underlie the research, a brief description of previous research and the gaps left behind, and the significance of the research including its objectives and benefits.

Add at least two paragraphs of previous studies. Classify previous studies by topic and highlight the gap and novelty in the last paragraph.

LITERATURE REVIEW
Subheading
Sub-subheading
This section contains various theories and opinions of experts that underlie the research supplemented with necessary citations.

RESEARCH METHOD
The research method contains a research design, approaches, types, data and data sources, as well as data collection, validation, and analysis techniques. The research method should be written in at least two decent paragraphs.

FINDINGS
Findings should present the results of the study clearly and systematically in accordance with the research questions. It should focus on the key findings and may include relevant evidence, such as quotations, tables, figures, or examples, where appropriate. The findings should be presented objectively without extensive interpretation or comparison with previous studies.

Subheading
Sub-subheading
This presents collected data in the form of paragraphs with points, tables, diagrams, graphs, and/or images (if any). Points are marked with numbers first and then letters alternately and hierarchically:

1. First point
    a. first sub-point
    b. second sub-point
    c. etc.

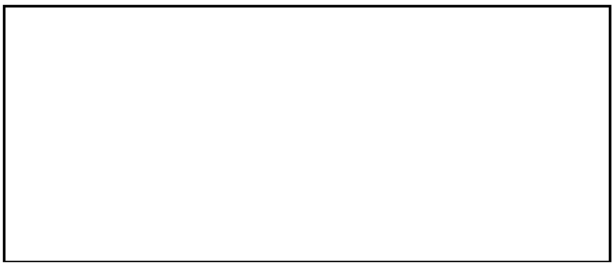

2. Second point
3. etc.

Each table should be numbered sequentially and have a title in italics at the top. A table should consist of only three horizontal lines, two at the top and one at the bottom.

Table X: Table Title

Column A	Column B	Column C
Row 1
Row 3

Each graph, diagram, and image must also be accompanied by a sequential number and caption in italics at the bottom.

Figure/Diagram X: Title

A detailed explanation of the results of data analysis, namely the relationships between the data found in the research.

DISCUSSION

Discussion should interpret and explain the findings in relation to the research questions, relevant theories, and previous studies. It should highlight the significance of the findings, including similarities, differences, and possible explanations in comparison with previous research. The discussion should also demonstrate the contribution of the findings to the development of knowledge in the relevant field.

CONCLUSION

This summarizes the content section containing the main points of the research results along with the implications of the research and suggestions for related parties (if any).

REFERENCES

References should include a minimum of 25 sources (70% from journals published within the last ten years), single-spaced, in Arial font, size 9. If the reference is a journal article, it should not be more than 10 years old. References may be more than 10 years old if the reference is a book.
