Five Dollar Holler idea

My Immortal for boys
Legendary piece of bad Half-Life fanfiction

Like My Immortal, the author turned out to be fake but this time we know who did it.
Worth mentioning that basically every legendary bad fanfiction is fake DOOM: Repercussions of Evil by Peter Chimaera for example (“No john you are the demons”)

This started May 15, 2006
I was in the process of graduating high school
A user named squirrelking registered on fanfiction.net

He came out of the gate swinging with Halflife: Fulllife Consequences.

A series of short snippets of Half-Life fanfiction starring John Freeman (who was Gordon Freeman’s brother)

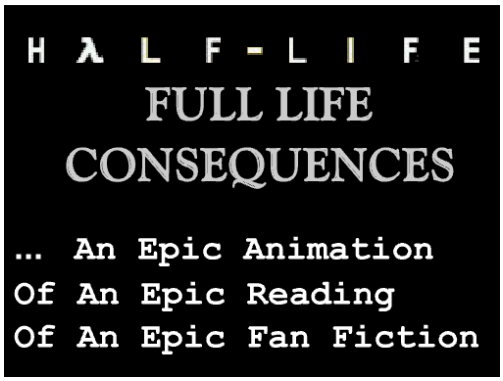

Got noticed almost immediately

Later LUELinks offsite

Literally the next day, May 16 2006, the canonical dramatic reading of Halflife: Fulllife Consequences is recorded and posted to YTMND by user blind51de

From there it spreads to places like 4chan's /f/ [Flash] board, Half-Life fansites, Newgrounds, etc

The version that makes it reach critical mass is a Gmod animation on YouTube set to blind51de's reading by the machinima animator ICTON

This wasn’t the first time the character model male_07 played a Freeman sibling

Male_07's appearance in "STUCK IN A PISSMARE", showing a variant of his usual outfit.

EVER DREAM THIS MAN?

Every day, all over the world, hundreds of gamers see this face in their Garry's Mod servers. If this man propkills in your server too, or if you have any information that can help us server ban him, please contact us.

He starred in the 2005 webcomic Concerned as Gordon Frohman

Squirrelking was only around for a year, his last upload being in March of 2007, but in that time he wrote several sequels so ICTON made fast follows of the entire series.

These stories are so well-known that if we read them it would he hard to not do an impression of blind51de's reading

So instead we're going to be reading squirrelking's other, less well-known, non-Half-Life fanfiction before closing on who was behind squirrelking

These are going to be extra fun because I know Winslow isn't familiar with some of these game franchises.

"Why are you working for bad guys" Jake Snake told the bad guy with the weapon

"Becaus they hav metal gears and hav weapons that shoot lasers" the bad guy said back to Jake Snake.

Then Jake Snake said "I have lasers too" and brought it out of his pocket where it was hiding and shot the bad guy in teh face.

"I dont like bad guys like that" Jake Snake said to the dead bad guy then he threw his cigar on him and he lighted on fire.

Jake Snake crawled fast again to where metal gears were fihgting becaus he could hear the bullets and booms. Jake Snake brought out his rocket gun and shot a rocket at a metal gear and the metal gear blew up and fell. Other metal gears came when the boom happened and came to Jake Snake who was crawling fast in bushes.

"They saw me" Jake Snake said so he put on camoflosh and disapeard.

"Where did he go" a metal gear said to the other metal gears

"Over there" and the metal gears shot at the bushs but they only hit ground and nothing.

Then Jake Snake said "i am here you bad guys" and was behind them. The metal gears turned around and saw Jake Snake in a metal gear that Jake Snake hided somewhere.

"Solid Snake fighted you bad guys and now i have to. you will pay fools" Jake Snake said. Then Jake Snake and the metal gears shot bullets and rockets and lasers and there was a lot of booms and dust came. The dust went away and Jake Snake was still in his metal gear but the other ones were there too and they said "We have armor Jake Snake" and Jake Snake said "What about this?" and shot something special at them.

Squirrelking turned out to be Something Awful poster Mattimer

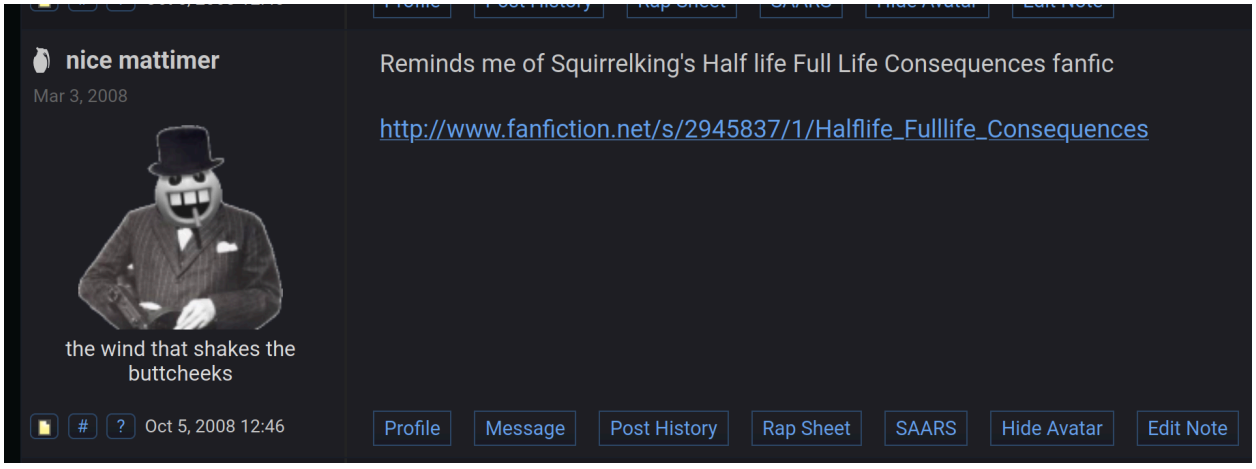

:haw: 😀

https://forums.somethingawful.com/showthread.php?threadid=3196540&userid=0&perpage=40&pagenumber=1

Surreptitiously promoted his work on SA before this

On Sep 04, 2009 he made the GBS thread My life as a minor Internet celebrity: Sex, Drugs, Rock, Roll & Fanfiction

In 2006 I was first exposed to the sub-genre of intellectual garbage known as "fanfiction." But, like an anthropologist witnessing his first human sacrifice to the Sun God, I wasn't disgusted or appalled... I was intrigued. I wanted to know what could drive the human mind to commit such atrocities. I wanted to step inside the brain of a 12 year old love-child between a crack addicted mother and a bottle of Jack Daniels. Society as we know it was at stake.

For the next ten months I absorbed myself into fanfiction. I learned its dirty little secrets. I learned its recipe.
- Place beloved cultural icons in blender
- Add arch nemesis or main character from another series
- Pour in 3lb of Grandy's Grade A Homoeroticism
- Sprinkle a dash of mental retardation over the mix, then sprinkle three hundred more
- Season to taste
The formula was as simple as the authors themselves and as effective as they are at eating glue. It was perfect.

Then I realized something: I am as intelligent as they are dumb, why can't I write something? Why can't I write a story so mind-numbingly bad that it stands the test of time as one of the worst things ever written in the English language? Surely I could beat them at their own game. It was then that I heard the choir of angels and knew what has tobe done.

I started my journey by downing a few thermometers and catching my head in the car door.

I picked a game that I had a knowledge of as loose as my stool after a case of beer: Half-life.
I picked a biography for my pseudonym that would inspire as much compassion as it would contempt: an 8 year old French Canadian boy who was using fanfiction as a way to learn English.
I picked a cutesy yet catchy name: squirrelking.
The story was laid out on the bed and now all I had to do was fuck it.

The resulting "Half-life: Full-life Consequences" story started off modest. I posted it on a forum as a thing you TOTALLY HAVE TO SEE and some other guy named blind51de did an epic narration. It went to YTMND, got passed around like a donkey in a North Korean village, and further inspired a flash animation. It reached the heights I never thought it could. While writing a Metal Gear Solid series that got popular on 4chan for some reason, I threw down a quick sequel and thought the series would suffocate and die in the stuffed anus of the Internet.
I was wrong.

On a sunny January morning in The Year of Our Lord 2008, I awoke to a new result during my many sessions of googling myself: A HLFLC movie by a person known as "djy." It was silly, stupid, funny and had its own flavor. It now has over 2 million views and yes, I have used it to get some action. The sequel was also made into a movie and soon after that he started selling t-shirts with catchphrases. I have no issues over selling out and contacted him about getting my share of the dead prime ministers.

As the series began to grow, along with questions of a sequel, I thought of reviving the exploits of John Freeman. I didn't want to try to copy what I did with the first two and thus create a cheap imitation of myself, so I went full-bore mongoloid with the spelling errors and grammar mistakes. I wanted to see what an epic movie would look like if a preadolescent Gary Busey wrote the script, and off I went. I got some reviews saying I was "trying too hard", which cut me deep, but with the stupid lines also came more catchphrases and thus more t-shirt sales and if the American health care system has taught me anything, it's that money heals all wounds.
Capitalism will always beat integrity, especially when it comes to fanfiction.

Now, I've always thought that the mystique of squirrelking was the reason for its success. No one actually knew whether or not there was actually a boy out there trying his darndest to put 2 coherent words together and no one likes anything more than laughing at a foreign person. But now there is no point... a little while ago I was told that, because the t-shirts had copyrighted material on them, they would not be printed. No shirts. No money. More tears. I needed another way to stroke the fame phallus for all its worth. I stopped caring about the money and strove for recognition and attention. I swallowed my pride (and anything else the producer promised would make me famous) and whored myself out for all to see. I even posted a thread dedicated to the series, which has been lost to everyone but those with an archive account.

Since "Dancing With The Stars" won't take washed up celebrities who write like children with Downs Syndrome, only ones who look like them, I needed another option. With nowhere else to turn, I emailed the New York Times and told them that I had a story that makes Deep Throat look like a 10 year old girl with a bad gag reflex. My reply was a cease and desist letter.

So that's it. This thread is my Waterloo- squirrelking's last stand. Peter Chimaera, another proprietor of repugnant prose, has asked me to co-write something with him. I declined. That part of me is dead.
I ask for no reward, no sympathy, no praise. I only wish to put my handprint on the walls of Internet history, my chance to say "I was here. I belonged."

The squirrelking is dead, long live the king.

Ban #2 is a Toxx Clause, but not an election one

It’s about the TV show Breaking Bad

I was an avid participant in the Breaking Bad threads

When the episode Crawl Space aired the week before, I made this edit of the climactic scene at the time

The Breaking Bad thread was kind of known for being a shitshow

Spoilers for a 15 year old show follow:

Season 4, Episode 12 of Breaking Bad
“End Times”

aired October 2, 2011

This is the episode where the drug kingpin Gus Fring wants to kill Walter White for tipping off the DEA that they were going to assassinate Hank Shrader.

There's a scene where Walter is alone at his house waiting to be killed and he's idly spinning a gun on a table on his back porch
he pauses thoughtfully after it points at a potted plant near him

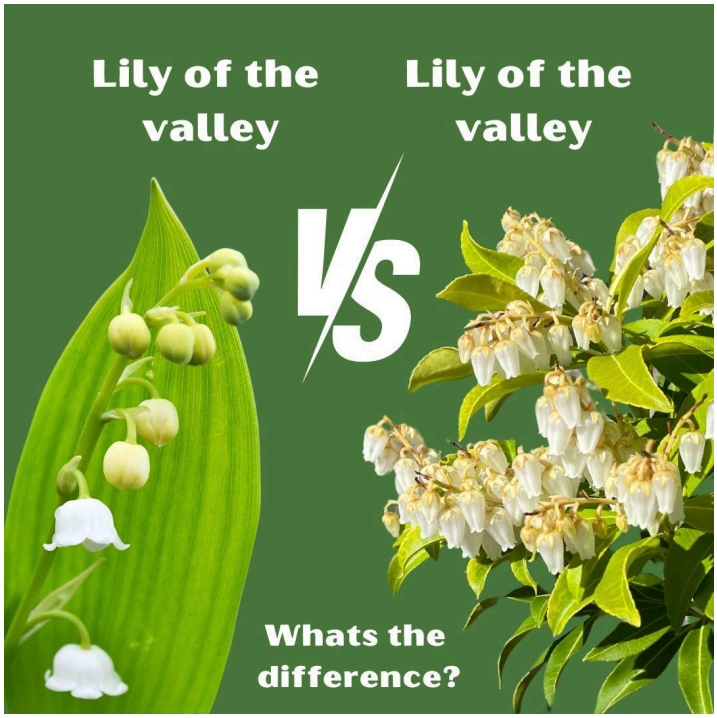

Then later in the episode Brock, the son of Jesse’s girlfriend, gets hospitalized because he’s been poisoned
Walt convinces Jesse that Gus must have done it
This is what convinces Jesse to turn on Gus and side with Walt in the finale

This is the penultimate episode of the season so there is a lot of speculation and analysis about where this is all going

People online rapidly notice that the potted plant was Lily of the Valley, a highly poisonous decorative plant with distinctive bell-shaped flowers

- So the theory emerges that when Walt had that scene of looking at and thinking about the plant, that was him getting the idea to poison Brock with Lily of the Valley to trick Jesse
    - And in the finale it would be a big reveal that Walt had been behind everything and had crossed the moral event horizon of poisoning a child

Mattimer was not a fan of this theory!

October 3rd, the day after the episode aired:

🚨🚨🚨IF WALT POISONED THE KID I WILL CHANGE MY AVATAR TO ANYTHING YOU GUYS WANT AND I'LL ALSO MAIL HAND-WRITTEN LETTERS TO THE PRO-WALT-POISON CROWD'S PARENTS TO CONGRATULATE THEM ON WHAT BRIGHT AND ASTUTE CHILDREN THEY'VE REARED🚨🚨:🚨

Because if you seriously think Walt poisoned the kid, I dunno. And if the writers do go down that route, I don't want to live in this world anymore.

After several arguments:

See you next week, everyone. Just a heads up: I expect a 500 word apology from everyone who thinks Walt poisoned an innocent child.

The following week, the season 4 finale episode Face Off airs
It is one of the best episodes of TV ever made and also delivers the twist ending that Walter was indeed the poisoner.

Mattimer's response?

Everyone who said "Walt poisoned Brock" going back to the end of the last episode damn well meant ricin.

Then he tried malicious compliance by writing letters about people being experts at child poisoning and asking for addresses to send them to which got him the ban.

If we need more time or just feel like it, we can totally read HL:FLC to close out https://www.fanfiction.net/u/10470027/squirrelking]
