Success Criteria Example for Personal Project

Product success criteria	Details
Educational Value	It is crucial for my product to have a clear explanation which is fundamental to making a comprehensive guide. The overall success of the product for this criteria will be that it has to be educational for people reading it. It doesn't matter whether a person knows anything about Biology or not. Secondly, the guide has to provide them with relevant information about the GI tract. Furthermore, the textbook should prove to be a valuable educational tool for students when they study the digestive system, offering them substantial assistance and insights into the subject matter.
Aesthetics ● All the diagrams are clear and all the notation is visible.	The functional and anatomical diagrams have to be coherent, clear and relevant. The reader has to understand what you are talking about in the book and depicting information is one of the ways which will assist me in interpreting information as efficient and as simplified as possible. Each page will has to have at least 1 picture, diagram. At least 5 hand-drawn diagrams throughout the whole book.
Size ● The guide/book should be at least 25 pages long including all the topics in them. The	My primary goal for my product's success is to make it at least 25 pages long. The reason for that is because there is an extensive amount of topics that have to be included as well as diagrams for each one. The digestive system is one of the most crucial and major systems in the human body. To provide a clear and lucid explanation, I will have to delve into the details about the components, organs, tissues, biochemistry, molecular biology , pathophysiology of the GI shrift size should be not more than 38 (Canva).	tract. Therefore, writing a longer document with at least 25 pages enables a more thorough explanation.

Time ● It should be completed fully by November	The product has to be fully completed by November. Setting up a relatively early deadline for the completion of my project will ensure that I will have enough time for my report for the personal project. This is another way by which I will test the success of my intended product.
Resources ● Canva, Youtube and online articles	Canva platform will be used to write the textbook. It provides a wide range of templates and features as well as user-friendy interface.

ATL skills: For the learning goal

1. Collaboration- Writing a textbook on one of the biggest topics in Biology required a wealth of information. Therefore, I sought my grandfathers guidance to gain a deep understanding this particular topic. My grandfather is a gastroenterologist specializing in this area. Hence, I decided that his support can greatly aid me in thoroughly delving into the topic. We have discussed how to study for the project the best way in order to include all of the topics into my guide. He assisted me in my choice of the topics that were needed as well as provided me with valuable resources where I got most of the information from. This ATL skill is linked with my learning goal because I was able to receive lots of different sources such as (books, articles and study guides) which enabled me to thoroughly explore all the complexities of the gastrointestinal tract. Finally, I was refining my knowledge by talking to my granddad. I wsould learn a topic and start explaining it to him, this way I was able to retain information for much longer. Moreover, this ensured that my explanation encompasses all the details of the topics and that I understood the information correctly.

ATL skills: For the product goal

2. Research- In order to ensure that my product would excel, I initiated extensive research about writing a guide and more importantly a medical guide. I have come across multiple techniques that enabled me to structure the contents of the book in an organized manner. Various resources assisted me in doing so and have provided me with valuable information that I implemented. The reason for this particular ATL skill being for my product goal is because I have searched for sources that would help me to systematically organize the topics. This ultimately substantially amplifies the comprehensiveness of my textbook.
