An article to discuss whether schools should ban comic books from the school library

Should comic books be banned from the school library?

Nowadays, comic books are popular among students. However, there is a controversy that whether schools should ban comic books from the library. I believe it is unwise to ban comic books from the school library.

Reading comic books has more advantages than disadvantages. First of all, comic books are easy to read which can help students to read better and faster. Also, students can easily learn different languages, vocabulary and sentence structures. And some comic book's contents are so marvellous that they can help students brainstorm ideas and develop their creativity in writing. Comic books not only allow students to learn writing skills, it can also help students to develop a habit of reading, because comic books' illustrations are beautiful and attractive. It can draw students' interest to keep reading on.

Furthermore, comic books are more attractive than written books, for the majority of students. Textbooks have only texts which are too boring, but comic books have enchanting illustrations. This is the reason that students are interested to keep reading on. Also, students would like to read comic books because there are beautiful pictures.

In addition, schools ought not to limit students' freedom of reading. In my opinion, many students like to read comics. If you banned comics, it will let students who like reading comic books lose their interest to read. Also, if schools ban comic books, students can only read what they don't like or they can go outside to buy or read so that they will get the wrong information from the wrong books. But if you have filtered the information in the comic books, you can put them in the school library. Comic books not only have interesting information, they can have educational content too. So I think if schools ban comic books, then students can only read written books which are too tedious and not diversified.

In a nutshell, these three points explain why I disagree with the ban of comic books from the school library. This will hinder the students to develop a habit for reading.
