

Rex was just waking up and about to go get breakfast when he mysteriously shrunk down to the size of a small bug out of nowhere. He is now a tiny helpless and fragile man on the dusty floor. It was so sudden, he didn't even put some clothes on as he has the habit of eating breakfast while wearing nothing but his underwear, and the weird part is that his underwear shrunk with him. A lot of emotions are running around his head, such as anxiety and confusion. But they are replaced with just sheer terror when he sees Pyra standing right next to him and staring at him.

The view is the most intimidating thing he has ever seen, even counting all the adventures he had in the past. She just seems absolutely gigantic compared to him now, like even bigger than some big titan. The reason she's here all dressed up like that is she woke up earlier and already prepared herself for the day. In fact she was on her way to go see Rex and potentially wake him up. But now she's staring at him and doesn't recognize him because of his small size, which is why he is absolutely terrified for his life. Pyra is generally a very sweet person, but she also somewhat likes crushing bugs under her feet. Maybe it's because Rex doesn't like bugs so she feels like doing him a small favor by squashing them on the spot. And even though she is getting confused by his tiny appearance here, it doesn't stop her from doing exactly the same thing right now.

Rex, desperate, tries to call her. He screams from the top of his lungs to try and make her realize it's him. But it's all in vain, he's way too small to get heard by her. And he knows he can't run away from her at this size, and he's completely paralyzed in fear anyway. The current predicament, the sight of a giant girl he knows is about to step on him, the really loud and reasoning voice shaking his all body, and the mere thought that his life could end right here, right now. All of this is just too much for the once brave hero, and all he can do is lay on the floor and have a panic attack as he watches Pyra lifting her enormous foot. She also has the habit of walking around the house with her socks, which makes them covered in dust. And this the last thing Rex will see, as she finally decides to get on with it, wiggles her toes and lowers her foot...

THUD

Pyra slams her foot on Rex's minuscule body and immediately realizes that he's pretty sturdy. So she decides to continue her assault and mercilessly steps on him multiple times. She never encountered a bug who could resist her steppies that much and find it pretty amusing to keep stepping on it. She thought she just liked doing Rex a favor by getting rid of bugs, but turns out she just somehow enjoys squashing them under her feet. So she is just having some fun doing it, and also imagines how delightful it would be to do this with Mythra or Nia, or maybe even Rex.

Meanwhile, speaking of Rex, he is going through possibly one of the most painful torture possible. One step feels like getting smashed head on by a mountain, and Pyra just keeps them coming. His body did become pretty resistant after shrinking, but it doesn't prevent him from sustaining indescribable and always increasing physical pain from this. The only thing he can think of right now is hoping that Pyra stops this, that she somehow realizes it's him and puts an end to this cruel torment. But it's not going to happen, she's just having too much fun stomping what she thinks to be a bug. His body is very tough, but there is so much it can endure. He can feel it with each relentless step, his body cannot take much of this and is breathing more and more...

CRUSH

His body reaches its limits and Rex ends up becoming a tiny red stain under Pyra's dusty sock. She has no idea what actually happened and is just glad she had so much fun, wiggling her toes again with this time the remains of the tiny "bug" she crushed stuck to her sock. Then she just goes back to what she was initially doing, going to Rex's room. She doesn't even bother cleaning or changing her socks and just walks away with the little blood stain stuck there. She's just thinking about all the nice activities she could do with him today...