Marijuana Legalization

There is an illegal drug known as marijuana. Many people actually want this drug to be legal. In fact, there are already two states that have made it legal; they are the states of Washington and Colorado. Alaska might soon follow, too. People fail to realize that there are costs of marijuana use. The costs are not related to prohibition, but related to the effects of marijuana use. America should not legalize marijuana overall.

There are reasons for not legalizing marijuana. Despite the medicinal use, there are also very dangerous consequences of using marijuana. Marijuana is a dangerous drug and harmful to your health. It is also the most commonly abused drug in the United States and around the world.

It can cause heart disease, car accidents, brain damage, addiction to not only marijuana but other drugs, hallucinations, anxiety, depression, lung damage, crime and death. If we legalize marijuana, it will make things even worse than they already are. Is it worth it?

A good solution to this issue is educating the public about the harmful effects of marijuana on society. We could make a Public Service Announcement about marijuana and have it be broadcasted all over the world. We could let the state officials know about the effects and costs of marijuana and its legalization.

Overall, marijuana should not be legalized. It is harmful to human health and raises crime in the world. It will increase the possibilities of the negative effects of marijuana happening and will be impossible to stop if we legalize the drug.
