

Research Experience Assignment

In this class, you'll learn about scientific investigations into human and animal psychology. You'll also get hands-on experience by participating in research throughout the semester. These research studies will give you insight into how researchers study various behaviors and their causes and effects. Each study will be explained to you and you're encouraged to ask questions and learn more about the scientific process. Your participation in these projects not only benefits your education but also contributes to the broader scientific community. Your involvement could even impact future textbooks in the social sciences.

If you do not want or are unable to participate in research, you may engage with social science research by reading and reflecting on journal articles - reports on the scientific studies that describe their methods, results, and conclusions.

To complete this assignment, you will need to create a SONA account and complete 1 credit of research participation. You can register your account and sign up for studies or article summaries here: <https://csupueblo.sona-systems.com/>
