

The peasant family destroyed by the Evermondes has a young sister. (p. 377)		Madame Defarge is part of the peasant family and wants revenge.
Carton goes to a chemist's shop. (p. 357)		Carton drugs Darnay so they can switch places.
Carton thinks he should go to St. Antoine so that people "know there is such a man as I" in the quarter. (p. 386)		Carton and Darnay can switch places without anyone wondering why someone looking like Darnay is on the streets of Paris.
Carton tells Mr. Lorry to hold on to his traveling papers. (p. 392)		Traveling papers help Darnay escape from Paris.
Carton has Darnay write a letter to Lucie about "words that passed between us, long ago." (pp. 400-401)		Carton is referring to his promise to sacrifice himself for Lucie when he confessed his love to her.
Carton wanders around Paris, thinking of the phrase, "I am the Resurrection and the life." (p. 358)		Carton is going to help Darnay be "recalled to life" by breaking him out of prison.
Carton makes a deal with Barsad to get access to the prison. (p. 352)		Barsad helps Carton get to Darnay's cell as he switches places with Darnay.
The Wood-Sawyer is very friendly to Lucie as she comes to stand outside the tower that holds Darnay. (pp. 318-319)		The Wood-Sawyer is spying for the Defarges.
Carton tells Lorry that if Lorry doesn't follow his instructions, many lives would be sacrificed. (p. 394)		Carton plans to sacrifice himself for Darnay and wants to make sure that the plan works, even when he's not present to carry it out.
Dr. Manette asks Darnay not to tell him Darnay's name until the wedding morning. (p. 156)		Darnay is part of the Evermonde family that imprisoned Dr. Manette.
Manette looks ill after Darnay tells the story of a prisoner who hid a letter in his cell. (p. 116)		Manette hid a letter while in prison that explains his imprisonment and denounces the Evermonde family.
Jacques Three and Defarge are among the people who storm the Bastille; they search 105 North Tower (p.248)		Monsieur Defarge says he found Dr. Manette's letter in the chimney of 105 North Tower.