

Warehouse Operative

Job description

The role available is as a warehouse operative in a rapidly growing business. There are full and part time roles available.

The successful candidate will be working alongside existing team members to pick and pack orders for lighting products, which are being sent out to consumers.

The business is www.lightsave.co.uk and with a strong foothold in the hospitality market providing many well-known brands such as Hilton, Holiday Inn etc with their lighting and electrical products. As well as our core business we have a large presence on Amazon, eBay and our own website which receives a large amount of orders.

The successful candidate will have good computer skills as an essential part of the role will be to process goods in and goods out physically but also on the system.

You will also be responsible for keeping the workplace very clean and tidy ready for the next day, replenishing stock and noticing what stock is selling well to advise the team that replacement orders may be required. Another responsibility will be to send large orders to Amazon for them to dispatch separately, so this will include wrapping them, labelling them and packing them in the most efficient space saving ways.

The hours would be 8am-5.30pm for both roles, for the part time role a regular schedule will be agreed dependent on how efficient and how quickly the successful candidate works, whilst also taking the necessary care and attention to detail to complete the task to the desired high standard.

There is the opportunity to progress within the company for the right diligent can do attitude.

Experience of sending products to amazon will be favourable but not essential.
