

MADISON: It's like everyone at school sees her stuff. She has a lot of friends.

MS. RAYMORE: Have you talked to anyone else about this? Your parents or your friends?

MADISON: No.

MS. RAYMORE: How can we make this right?

MADISON: I just don't think she gets how this hurts me.

MS. RAYMORE: Can we share that with her? It's up to you. Would you be willing to type out your story? You can make a video or even just record with your voice.

MADISON: Okay.

MS. RAYMORE: Okay? Okay.

MS. RAYMORE: Well, the reason you're here today is that I wanted to share something with you that one of your classmates wrote. Would you be open to reading something?

HOLLY: Sure.

MS. RAYMORE: Okay. Now, Madison did say this is okay that I share this with you. Here you go.

KIM: Hey, sweetie. Sorry it's so busy tonight. How was school?

HOLLY: It was okay.

KIM: Good.

HOLLY: Um, there was this one...

PATRON: Hey, Kim, how about a refill? So, how's your day been?

KIM: Oh, it's long. I worked a double today.

PATRON: What's the special?

MS. RAYMORE: Hey, Holly, Madison, we're ready for you.

MADISON: I just think you need to know that when you post things like that it hurts people.

HOLLY: I'm sorry. It was a stupid joke. It wasn't even funny. I made the video, but I didn't post it. Somebody took my phone and -- that doesn't matter. It was my fault and I didn't think about how it was gonna affect you, and I definitely didn't think about what it would mean for a teacher to be in that video, so, I'm sorry.

MS. RAYMORE: Okay. Now that everyone's had a chance to share their story, what do we think we can do to make things right?
