

BLUE FOX

BY LEO LEE

One Night in the Forest, Blue Fox was bullied by Red Fox because his color was different from the other foxes. Blue Fox was mad and stressed, so he went out for a walk to calm down.

While walking, he met Bear. Bear looked at Blue Fox and gasped, " You are so beautiful!" Blue Fox did not believe him because other foxes had just bullied him. So Bear took Blue Fox to the other animals, such as Rabbits, elephants, and even Ants! Every animal said that Blue Fox was Beautiful.

Blue Fox was surprised then, and he was happy to hear it. He felt like he didn't have to care what others said about him.

Years later, Blue Fox became famous, and many animals admired him. The Red Fox was jealous, but Blue Fox didn't mind. He was happy being himself.

One night, Red Fox came and asked, "I bullied you before. Didn't it hurt?"

"It did," Blue Fox admitted, "but I learned that what matters most is how I feel about myself, not what others think. Being different isn't bad—it's special."

Hearing this, Red Fox felt bad about how he had treated Blue Fox before. He apologized and began to treat him better. Over time, the other foxes also started to notice the unique qualities in themselves and others. They learned to accept themselves and others for who they were.

Blue Fox inspired the animals, teaching everyone to celebrate their differences.

Moral: It's okay to be different.
