Synopsis:

A world renowned Doctor is recruited by a “Newborn” vampire to find a cure for a disease plaguing Vampire kind and his master. The Doctor, unlike other humans, only cares about if there is a patient in need.

Logline:

In a world of vampires with god-like powers beyond what any regular human could possibly match, an unlikely pair is formed between a human doctor and a Newborn vampire. To search for a cure for a disease plaguing vampire kind. A partnership which puts them at odds with both the vampire and human worlds.

World:

The Vampires have a wide range when it comes to power and standing in the world. As they grow in age and power, they also have various skills they can develop with practice. Such as the ability to walk through and stand on the air as if it was solid ground, or incredibly enhanced physical abilities. But their powers can run much deeper than that. Which is evident by the Vampire Society. A pocket dimension created and maintained by ancient powerful vampires. Which clearly leaves the human's at a major disadvantage in the conflict. However, they have Vampire hunters equipped with special tools and training, which act as a line of defense for human kind. And while they desperately fight for survival, the aristocratic vampires are simply just constantly at odds with each other, more worried about fancy balls and social standing than anything else.
