

Mimi Atlabachew is a Family Nurse Practitioner, She earned her degree at the University of British Columbia. Mimi started in CSC PI/RTC in 2008 as a student and as a registered psychiatric nurse in 2009. She earned her bachelor of science degree and became a registered nurse in 2013. She has been with CSC for almost 15 years and held various positions, including chief of health services at the regional medical hospital. She was recently assigned an NP role. She is currently developing and implementing the first Nurse practitioner position within RTC/PI.

As a shop steward, she has been an advocate for minority groups and the advancement of nurse practitioners within her region and across.

She is focused in primary care, with the aim of creating a equitable, accessible and sustainable healthcare system.

Her goal is to build an interconnected network of healthcare professionals that will eliminate healthcare disparities for patients.

She is the founder of BCHCPA- Black Canadian Healthcare Professionals Association. BCHCPA is a non-profit organization focused on health promotion and advocacy, providing education and awareness of limitations in diversity and inclusion within the healthcare system; and creating a network of healthcare professionals empowered with knowledge to influence change.