

Hello! We are ending our unit on race and as a final writing piece please answer the following questions in a timed writing activity.

- What's the most important thing you learned so far in this class? Why do you think so?
- What can you now do with what you know?
- Regarding race what are you still curious about? Why?

As preparation for this reflection, you were asked to watch the documentary "13th" or read the "The First White President" by Ta-Nehisi Coates. Use the following questions to guide your writing:

- What was your initial reaction after watching 13TH or reading the article?
- What are your thoughts on the film or article's main claim? What are they claiming?
- The film argues that there is a direct link between American slavery and the modern American prison system and the article argues that Trump was elected as a direct response to the United States first black president. What is your take on this argument?
- How does the film or article connect to what we learned and discussed in this class?
- What else would you like to let us know about your learning that occurred in this unit? Do you have any feedback on how we could improve this unit in the future, in terms of activities or structure?
