CONSTRUCTIVE CRITICISM

Constructive criticism is a helpful way of giving feedback that provides specific, actionable suggestions. Rather than providing general advice, constructive criticism gives specific recommendations on how to make positive improvements.

Please do not take constructive criticism offensively. It is meant to help you. We would never insult your art work or give any feedback with negative connotations.

Also, constructive criticism is just our opinion. By no means does it mean you HAVE to make the changes we suggest to your artwork.

cookie: This is such a great first entry to PXP! You did amazing!! I love it. Everytime I look back at it, I see a different little detail like the carrots or the tiny little heart on the bunny's ear. I honestly can't find anything to give constructive criticism on, this was very well executed!

els: Wow! Amazing first entry to PXP. This is super cute and I love how you added so many details. Thank you for entering, no feedback from me other than to keep submitting :)

It's really tough finding anything that could use improvement. Hmm. If anything, maybe adding a bit of a shadow to the backside of the body part of the costume? The hoodie has that bit of shadow on the back side that you can see for reference!  els: Absolutely adorable! Such a cute and amazingly drawn bee costume. I wish this was an actual furni I could put in my rooms. I am finding trouble trying to critique this so well done and thank you for submitting :)

I'm having a hard time finding anything that needs any improvement.. hm. I think, if anything, maybe you can work on the head part of the armchair just to kinda fit kuromi's head shape a bit more? I definitely understand that you may have kept the shape just so that you wouldn't lose the bunny element, but I think it could better resemble kuromi if you had changed the shape, or maybe even spacing out the eyes a bit would have worked too! Regardless, you did a great job :)
