Abstract (Cambria 12 pt Bold)

The abstract should be written in a single paragraph, approximately 250–300 words in length. It should not contain quotations, tables, figures, footnotes, or excessively detailed discussion. The language used should be academic, straightforward, and to the point. The abstract should accurately reflect the content of the article. Authors should not make claims that go beyond the research data and methods. For example, qualitative research or case studies should not use claims such as "proves an effect" unless the research design truly allows for causal evidence. (Cambria 12 pt)
