Frontier areas of science are currently defined unaffirmed through esotericism

An alien offers an explanation of advanced travel with a Rubik's cube

Without an esoteric basis, the alien's explanation is useless

Let's look at the basic law of consciousness, which is known from esotericism. Consciousness or awareness is determined by the incomprehensible interconnected action of three components: the observer, the observed and the known. Advanced individuals know this and even use it in their devices. I will mention for now the apparatus of dr. Grabovoi with three crystals and the Ubuntu logo with three circles. Our human consciousness has already been used in technologies according to the Teachings of dr. Grabovoi, but also in orgone cannons for breaking clouds with hail and many other examples. But timeless space travel to any part of the Multiverse becomes very incomprehensible to us.

An employee of the secret American space force asked an alien from an advanced civilization to explain how they manage to travel over unimaginably long distances. The alien replied that he would not understand, but the man insisted on an explanation. The alien then explained everything to him by setting up a Rubik's Cube. But the man did not understand, and the alien replied that he knew he would not understand. Despite the previous mention of spaceships based on consciousness in this testimony, the Rubik's Cube distracted me from the correct explanation. But thinking and talking to a friend gave me the correct answer, which had been inside me all along.

There is one consciousness of all that is and is not. Our individual human consciousnesses are parts of this boundless, eternal and omnipotent consciousness. At the highest original level, the Observer illuminates a part of the unmanifested boundlessness, which is the Observed component of one consciousness. The Knowledge component is the entire manifestation from the Akashic level, through the highest dimensions to the 3d reality, where even ordinary people come to their limited knowledge. But we observe and know this reality only if it is present in our consciousness. We direct our attention and eyes to the 'thing' and we know what we know in 3d space. What does the Rubik's Cube have to do with this?

The Rubik's Cube illustrates the technology of setting the chosen result. We see and know the result in 3D, but we had to rotate it to the resulting goal. At the levels of the boundless crystalline Akashic non-manifestation and the omnipresent observer, everything is here and now. All that is needed is to position the observer on the chosen part of the manifestation. In 3D, this is symbolically illustrated by the Rubik's Cube. The destination of space travel already exists, we still need our experience at the destination and we are already at the destination of the journey. It would be more difficult to travel to a non-existent part of the universe, which we would have to create from the Akashic. There are records of all possible destinations.

Our presence at the destination of such a journey would also require our interaction with the environment, so how would we communicate with the surroundings and how would we be perceived by the surroundings? Given the temporality, we or aliens could only appear to each other as projections in the consciousnesses of observers. But if we understand all the possibilities of psychophysical simulators (for example, for sex), then psychophysical experiences could also be just a simulation for our consciousness. Nothing is outside, everything is in consciousness regardless of the level or dimension. All that being said, there can also be a collective consciousness and 'spaceships' are appropriate for this. All this exists in the Multiverse.

Let me mention some ancient esoteric techniques, as well as newer mental technologies, which have in common the use of focused concentration and trained consciousness: Merkaba, or light vehicle, time and space travel, remote viewing, information management technologies according to dr. Grabovoi for normalizing states, orgone cannon programming, orgone energy according to Reich, etc. But the above should not be confused with hidden free energy technologies, anti - gravity technologies and other known unaffirmed facts. Tesla already spoke about this, and he also demonstrated many of the now hidden inventions in practice. Flying saucers and the like are outdated technology that some aliens gave in exchange for
