

Please read the letter and sign below with your name and your affiliation with the university (Course / Job Title). Please do not amend.

Dear University of Leeds,

We are writing in advance of the upcoming deadlines and Semester 2 teaching. As we are all aware, the situation over the Christmas period has worsened rapidly, and the third wave of this pandemic is looking to be the worst we have experienced yet. Students have received little guidance from the University and the government alike whilst continuing to navigate the impacts we have felt financially, academically and emotionally. Moreover, after moving up to Leeds at the beginning of last term, many students' health suffered as a result of contracting the virus. The sole response received was in the form of finding ourselves scapegoated by both the government and press, with little support from the institution we hoped would be working to support us.

We, as students, thoroughly appreciate the efforts of teaching staff as they have had to quickly adapt to new methods of delivering learning. We have worked hard to engage with online learning and adjust to the new measures, but today, we are reaching out to you as we find ourselves struggling more than ever before. The adversities that we have faced since March have only been exacerbated during the Christmas break and we write with an aim to begin to reverse the difficulties we have all suffered.

A recent NUS survey reported that more than 50% of students had suffered a decline in their mental health since the pandemic began. The gulf between working-class and middle-class students is widening due to the lack of accessibility of learning resources. Our progress is desperately being impacted. We are only human and are all trying our best in the current circumstances, and so we wish to work alongside the University in order to address concerns regarding the following issues:

- Many students have felt isolated due to the lack of practical communication and support from the University. At the start of the semester, we received communication days before universities were due to open regarding essential information such as travel, reading lists and timetables. Moreover, we can only imagine that teaching staff are inundated with emails that need responding to and, as a result, many students have had issues with contacting specific tutors. It's not as if we can knock on an office door to chase up a concern in person either.
- Humanities, arts and social sciences students have largely seen exams replaced with essays. Whilst we understand the reasons behind this in theory, this has been near impossible to manage in practice. Most people have found themselves in a situation in which they have in excess of 10,000 words to write over the Christmas period and thus, despite the difficulties of this year, have not been able to have a single moment for relaxation over the festive season.
- STEM students have seen labs cancelled and a lack of suitable replacement for essential practical skills experience, as well as many of their relevant schools making marking criteria harder due to exams being open-book without access to the revision classes that they would usually be offered.

- Students who are required to complete clinical placement hours in order to receive their qualification (nursing, midwifery, medical and psychology students) have been required to remain in practice during the pandemic, often working on the front line with COVID positive patients. The associated stress and anxiety levels, coupled with the inability to visit friends or family is likely to have impacted their ability to complete assignments to the best of their ability, as well as affecting their overall mental and physical wellbeing.
- The lack of access to resources we have faced is only deepening the chasm between working-class and middle-class students, and disabled and non-disabled students. The myriad difficulties we have faced is non-exhaustive, but includes lack of access to libraries and specific texts (and unequal access to those resources), students in difficult living environments perhaps without a desk or somewhere quiet to work or with extra caring responsibilities, family members or loved ones suffering from COVID-19, etc. Many of these students would normally return to university to work but are unable to due to current restrictions, extra pressures or fear of returning to university and being isolated for an undetermined period of time.
- Students living in student areas have suffered mass network outages and issues with Wi-Fi due to the over-crowded networks in the area.
- Many students were timetabled live lectures which have, in many cases, not been live and uploaded days (or in some cases, even weeks) after the lectures were timetabled reducing their ability to study effectively.

What do we want?

Despite the tumultuous state of the country and a complete upheaval of society as we know it, schools within the university have not taken sufficient steps to level the playing field between students of diverse backgrounds, and protect students against unfair underperformance. We therefore have three demands in order of preference.

1. A reintroduction of the safety net offered to the graduating class of 2020
2. A blanket extension on all assignments due up to the start of the second semester. This will not impact students who are on track, but will hugely assist in levelling the playing field for those in difficult circumstances
3. An overall reduction in the written workload for undergraduate students due to the lack of equal access to resources and appropriate learning environments

I wish to highlight Sussex University's words in their Save Our Grades campaign:

If teaching and learning are not the same, why is everything else?

We look forward to hearing from you soon regarding the ways in which you plan to support us during the upcoming exam and deadline season, as well as for the duration of the year.

Yours sincerely,
