

Not Following Instruction

"Yuck! If I have listen this will have never happened." I thought while spitting out the wax cake.

"Samuel, do you want to follow me to the bakery shop?" Mother asked.

I nodded my head and ran to changed my clothes. Mother knew I loved going to the bakery shop with her because I loved the smell of the fresh bread. I had always dreamed to be a baker. I just think decorecting cakes are easy and fun. It's just art. We don't need to add or minus."Hurry up or the bread will all be sold!" Mother said through the door. I grabbed my bag and ran as fast as my leg could carry me.

Soon we reach the bakery shop. "Buy one get one free. Buy one while there is discount." A voice floated out of the bakery shop. My mother rushed in and started choosing the freshest bread. I spotted some small and dainty cupcakes. Mother told me those were wax cake. I ask her whether those cake could be eaten or not but she told me no.

When Mother was paying for the bread , I sneaked to the corner and ate that small wax cupcake ."Yucked!" I screamed as I vomited on a woman shoe. Everbody in the shop turn and looked at me.

An Accident

As May realised that she was in the hospital with her family members, she regretted for being so careless when crossing the road. It happened like this...

“Yay! I just got my first FIRST JOB! I am going to ring up Mother!” May thought cheerfully. She fished out her brand-new IPHONE 6 out of her pocket and dialled Mother’s number. She chatted excitedly and suddenly...

“BANG!!!CRASH!!! AHHHH!!!” A lorry had just collided into May. She laid MOTIONLESS on the ground, groaning in pain. A few minutes later, a crowd of on-lookers had gathered around May and the lorry driver. All of them stood rooted to the ground when blood started oozing out of both the lorry driver and May. After the on-lookers regained their composure, one of them dialled for the police and the ambulance while the others tried to remain calm.

Soon, wails of sirens could be heard from the distance, the policemen tried to pull the lorry to a side of the road and the paramedics checked on the lorry driver and May. When being asked on, May replied in a soft voice “ I ...I fe..e..l..d..d..iz..zy...” She had just passed out. The paramedics immediately put her on a stretcher and whisked her to the nearest hospital.

When May came to, she was already at the hospital. Surrounding her bed were her worried and anxious-looking family members. They were holding some balloons that read ‘Get well soon!’ and “congratulations!”. May was touched as well as sad at the same time, she was glad that her family cared for her and wished that she could be discharged as soon as possible.

From that day on, May learnt to be MORE CAREFUL in future and never to repeat that mistake ever again.

Lost

Whenever I look at my green, shiny shirt, it reminds me of an incident a few months ago...

"I cannot wait to go for the nature walk!" I exclaimed. My family and I were going for a nature walk in the forest. But we did not give a final check on what we packed for our nature walk, if we had checked our bags, that would not have happened. We drove to the nearby forest and took a bit of time to find a parking lot. Soon, we got out of the car and followed the trail! "Wow! This is awesome! I cannot wait to see the animals!" My sister, Jeanie bellowed in excitement. We saw many beautiful animals such as monkeys and birds and so on and so forth.

After a long one hour of walking through the mud terrain, we took a break. My father suggested that we go home, but my sister refused so, we had to continue. We went through vines and climbed above trees. My sister soon felt tired and she finally agreed to leave the forest. But just then, my mother realised that we were lost and was the first to notice as she could not find our footprints. She immediately informed us we started to feel panic. My father checked his bag nervously for something that can navigate us back to the path. But, nothing. We sat there in fear as if all hope was lost, but not my sister. She encouraged us to have hope being rescued. We had tried to use different things to contact a search and rescue team, but there was no signal. We waited till sundown, but we heard a rumble, just like an all-terrain vehicle! "Mum, I hear something! Like a vehicle!" We stood up and walked, it was almost pitch black. Luckily, we brought a flashlight which light was very strong.

We found a track and suddenly we saw light...LIGHT. We turned and saw a vehicle that was rumbling. Two rangers hopped off the noisy vehicle and said "Have you been waiting long? It is really dark hop on in!" We got into the vehicle and left the forest. They dropped us off at the parking area where my father drove us home. We went home and learnt that we should check our things before something bad happens. "Javier! Time to go to the shopping mall." My mother exclaimed. I stood up and ran out the door. Leaving for the shopping mall.
