10/3/1921....

As a child Kukka was raised at an orphanage after being abandoned by her parents. Unlike many Nordic people Kukka had a black hair at birth making her stand out among the orphans.

2. BELLIGERENCE:

11/25/1939....

After 18 years in the orphanage- The WW2 had begun, Kukka enlisted in the Military (White Guard/ Suojeluskunta)

5 days later, the Soviets had invaded Finland through the Karelian Isthmus, the region north of Lake Ladoga, and Central Finland. Despite Finland being outnumbered, using their superior knowledge of their terrain, and effective defensive tactics they were able to inflict heavy damages to the Red army until the "Treaty Of Moscow".

3. MISFIRE:

3/13/1940....

After the end of the "Winter War" The Treaty forced Finland to give up 11% of its territory- yet worst of all during the conflict of WW2 countless tyranny, and dictatorship had begun to rise- the countries in Europe were suffering due to the actions the leaders were making. To attempt to resolve this solution, the Secretary proposed creating a group...Or a Platoon that mostly consists of having their most well trained soldiers- and Kukka was one of them. During the "Winter War" surprisingly although being a woman Kukka had claimed heads of 200 soviets using a rifle- due to Kukka's incredible sniping skills and having a Black hair unlike many Nordic, she was nicknamed "The Black Death" by the Red Army. The Finnish Military declared the Platoon to be named the "Crow Platoon" mainly because of their Stealth-like purpose and led by Captain Akseli

4. TO YOU IN 62 YEARS:

The laboratory Incident

4/4/1940....

A year before the Continuation War, The Crow Platoon infiltrated a Russian laboratory to gather intel on a leader of a government. They encountered resistance and were ambushed, resulting in most of the Platoon being wiped out, except for Kukka and Captain Akseli. In a desperate moment, Kukka injected herself with what she thought was epinephrine but turned out to be "Mutation Serum X." This caused her an unexpected amount of intense pain, followed by the ability to release electricity, which helped her and Captain Akseli barely escape from the laboratory despite facing Russian soldiers. However, the pain from before suddenly returned until their comrades arrived to extract them while she passed out.

5. CONVALESCENCE:

4/7/1940

After waking in a hospital-like room, Captain Akseli found Kukka there. Nurse Kaarina informed them they were in a medical care room after a mission to a Russian laboratory. The Secretaries were at fault for the failed mission for being careless about the potential dangers- and discussed to whether or not to disband the Crow Platoon, Akseli and Kukka were advised to stay until fully recovered

6. A FRIEND IN ME:

4/15/1940....

After Kukka and Captain Akseli were rescued, she fell into depression due to her comrades' loss. Captain Akseli sought guidance on the fate of the Crow Platoon and returned to find that Kukka was missing, he then later discovered Kukka cannibalizing a soldier. Akseli was suddenly attacked by Kukka but managed to knock her out and sought Kaarina for help. After a few minutes of research Kaarina had come to a conclusion that Kukka's violent behavior resulted from a parasitic injection. The parasite couldn't be removed as it was fused with Kukka's brain, but its effects could be managed. Akseli chose to help Kukka, deciding either to make Kukka take control over the parasite or isolate her- Kaarina advised against involving others to avoid further turmoil, Akseli then isolated Kukka to address her violent tendencies.

7. GENESIS:

6/5/1940....

Two months have passed since the incident at the Russian laboratory. Captain Akseli treated Kukka's depression and her violent nature, and she resumed her Military life. The Secretaries decided to maintain the Crow Platoon with only Akseli and Kukka due to the lack of well-trained soldiers. Meanwhile Morana, a Russian hitwoman, was sent to eliminate the remaining members of the Platoon. A new threat emerged from below, led by a maniac researcher Atlas Aetos.....
