Dangan Chillin's nuke

On the 2nd of August, 2025 our beloved Dangan Chillin with 22k members and over 5 year's worth of memories was destroyed. This blacklist will explain what happened, who was involved, and what you can do to protect yourselves.

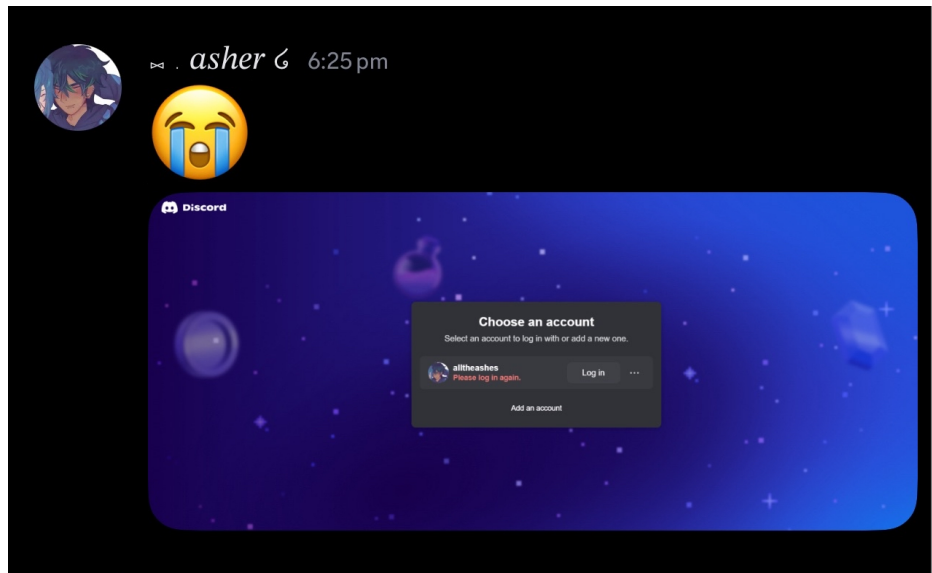

Disclaimers

- I will be keeping the staff member(s) involved anonymous as what happened was just a human mistake. We have since updated our security protocols and practices within our team to prevent anything like this from happening again.
- Do not join the server mentioned, it is not safe. Their server is a front for the work they do and messing with them could lead to your server being nuked, or generally having your data stolen/leaked.

Leading up to the raid

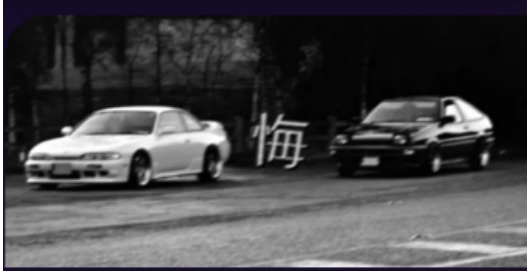

Social engineering: someone from the nuke group impersonated one of our staff members on an almost identical account. They dm'd one of our staff claiming that their account had been suspended/compromised and had moved to this new account, with "proof". The person behind the account had been stalking this mod for some time to have copied their speech patterns and know about their life such as their partner. Mod perms were granted to this new account which allowed them access to add their nuke tools to the server.

The nuke

- Custom webhooks were added to the server which caused all our channels to be deleted and be replaced with their own channels that spam pinged @/everyone with invites to their server.
- Members were also messaged by their custom app stating that Dangan Chillin was moving servers to their crucifixion one, telling them to join
- Custom roles with admin perms were created that were given to the attackers
- 9k members were massbanned
- Our vanity (/danganronpa) was attempted to be changed multiple times (thankfully we were able to restore it)

After the nuke, all apps and accounts associated with the attack had been deleted (clearly to avoid being reported or caught by discord)

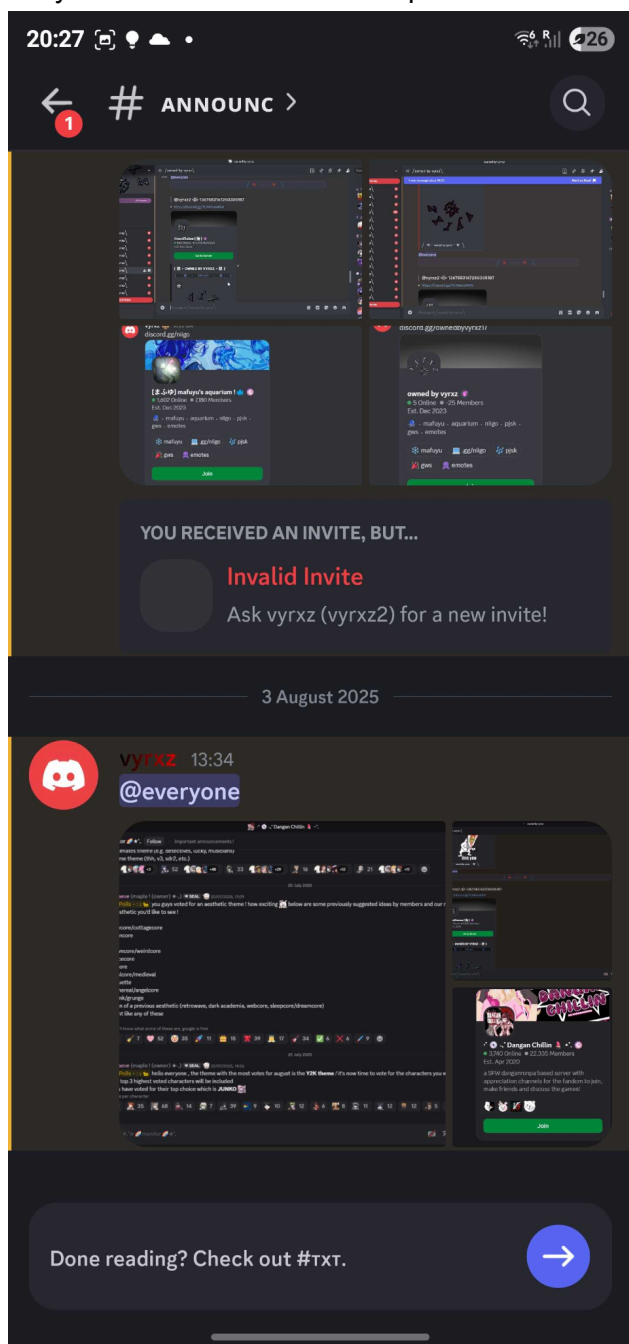

The crucifixion group

This is a group of serial nukers, who go around nuking servers for the pure fun of it. As described by them on their website:

This website has now seemingly been retired, however the information was useful.

They record these nukes and upload them to the above website and post them in their server.

In some of these videos, it's stated that they have obtained personal information on the user they hacked and whether they decided to leak it (doxx them) or not. Unfortunately, in some of these videos, personal information was displayed.

They also do a “daily purge” in their server of all main chat messages.

* We can't obtain the IDs of absolutely everyone of a high role or supports this server (boosters), as it had 7k members. However, we recommend banning upon recognition of either guild tag listed at the start of the document.

It is also worth noting that in more recent nukes than ours, burner accounts are being made by this group to get involved in a nuke and then get deleted after, making it harder to trace the people involved and preemptively ban any of them.

Recovery of Dangan Chillin

Fortunately, we have been able to recover our server. We were able to ban the users involved in the nuke, delete all of the webhooks, roles and channels before it was too late. For many, this was not possible. My condolences go out to all other servers affected by this group, as we are far from the first or last to be targeted by them.

From that day on, we basically had to restart! We remade all of our channels, unbanned every single member that was massbanned, etc. at the time of writing this, we have since regained our members.

How to help yourself

- Avoid clicking on suspicious links or downloading suspicious files. Another way in which these groups nuke servers is through token logging: often through files with a grabber that obtains your login details for someone to use that can bypass passwords and even 2fa.
- Change your password frequently - changing your password invalidates your previous token, meaning anyone who had it can no longer use it.
- If you run/moderate a server, establish secure protocols before granting mod perms to someone. Even if you think it wouldn't happen to you, it could. All it takes is one mod
- Preemptively ban groups like these from your server and stay aware of trending scams.
- Have heavy raid and nuke protocols in place such as anti-nuke bots and discord automod and raid features enabled.
- Support servers that are recovering/rebuilding from a nuke. If you are in a server when a nuke is actively occurring, report any "apps" being used by the nuke to discord.
- Report the active server and owner to discord!

Other crucifixion nukers

Alongside vryxz, there are other people nuking servers as part of the crucifixion group, odium and enclave, who are basically doing the same thing just with their own styles and signatures.

@everyone

A grid of 24 chat messages arranged in 4 rows and 3 columns. Each message follows a similar pattern: a user icon, the text 'crucified by enclave x odi...', and a small icon or tag. The tags include 'KrowSec', 'SHRX', 'RoN', and 'Roblox'. Some messages also include a birthday greeting: 'happy birthday gokulyyyy b...'.

Three screenshots of a Discord interface. The first two show a warning message: 'A server you joined, KrownSec { † } Echo, has been removed for platform manipulation. This server is no longer available. You can find a list of servers you have joined in the bottom right corner of the app.' The third screenshot shows a list of servers in the Discord sidebar, with 'KrownSec { † } Echo' highlighted.
